Around town

"Winners Circle" will be presented at the R.E.M. Lee Theatre tonight at 8:30 p.m. and it includes music festival winners Pamela Shaw, Denise Kenney, Rachel Reay as well as the Terrace Little Theatre production of Isadora and G.B.

Pamela Shaw will do a monologue from "Julius Caesar"; Denise Kenney will do the mime "Sunday Morning" and Rachel Reay will play the flute.

Although "Winners Circle" is separate from the Northwest Regional Arts Council convention, it is being held in conjunction with it. The convention registration is held tonight from 6:30 p.m. to 8 p.m. in the R.E.M. Lee Theatre where a visual arts display is being set up.

Involved with the convention are Tom Fielding, director of the cultural services branch; Anne Henslow, audience development director of the Arts Club Theatre; Rory Ralston, general manager of the B.C. Touring Council; Nini Baird, co-ordinator of the Outreach program at the Emily Carr College of Art; a secondary school band specialist and a theatre makeup specialist.

Most noteworthy for the public is that the convention ends at 8 p.m. on Saturday with a showcase of music and theatre.

Sandy Greenburg, folksinger, is one of the performers. She has travelled across Canada several times on tours. She does a mix of maritime folk songs, original works, bluegrass, traditional blues and singalong compositions.

Classical guitarist Joseph Bouchier of Kitimat and flautist Madeleine Butler will also perform. Both are students at the University of Victoria. The duo will be playing in various areas of B.C. this summer under the auspices of a provincial grant.

Their program includes Baroque, classical and modern works by such composers as Handel, Giuliani and Ibert.

The Jazz Band, composed of northwest band teachers, will also perform for the public during the showcase, which costs $2 for everyone.

The week of June 3 to June 9 has been proclaimed by both Mayor Dave Maroney of Terrace and Mayor George Thom of Kitimat as Red Cross Week. It is time to think about water safety and the prevention of drownings.

The computerized energy bus will be visiting Terrace from June 15 to June 29 to help business and industry learn the possibilities of energy savings.

GRANT AWARD

A Young Canada Works grant worth $3,906 has been awarded to the Kitimat Workshop to provide handicapped people with summer leisure activities.

The grant allows the workshop to supplement their usual staff with four students during July and August. Workshop manager Kim Kimble says he can be fully employed in implementing a variety of summer activities for shut ins, seniors, and others who are restricted in what they can normally do.

"We're open to suggestions from anyone we might be able to assist," says Kimble. "We've been thinking about providing both good and bad weather activities such as handicrafts, wood-working, sports, picnics, and hikes. We'll try and provide help to anyone who's interested, we're not confining the program to just handicapped people."

If you know of anyone who might be able to make use of the program contact Kimble at the Kitimat Workshop, 632-3774, between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. on weekdays.

Settlement is seen at INCO

SUDBURY, Ont. (CP) — A bargaining committee representing striking steelworkers at Inco Metals Co. have endorsed a bargaining committee recommendation for acceptance of a new settlement with the company.

Union officials said votes by bargaining committee members, who are also stewards, swung a resolution endorsing the new pact in favor of acceptance. The vote was 83-75 in favor of recommending acceptance.

Gib Gilchrist, northeastern Ontario supervisor for the United Steelworkers of America and Local 650's chief spokesman in the dispute, said following a five-minute meeting with stewards that he is confident their attitude will continue into membership meetings today and Saturday.

"We made improvements in areas of concern and there was a lot of praise for the bargaining committee," Gilchrist said.

Earlier this month, the stewards' body had rejected a bargaining committee recommendation for acceptance of a May 8 tentative agreement. Members rejected that three-year pact May 12.

The 11,700-member local votes on Sunday on the new three-year tentative settlement.

In two days of talks in Toronto this week, the union negotiated improvements in key areas of pension, cost-of-living allowance and vacations.

Members made it clear they wanted improvements in those areas in rejection of the earlier pact.

In the newest contract the union achieved a 30-year-and-out pension clause regardless of age after the second year of the agreement. In earlier negotiations, the company offered retirement after 35 years with full pension, regardless of age.

The company also agreed to "roll in" the cost-of-living allowance in the calculation of overtime, incentive work and holidays.

DEFECT FOUND

Crash said likely

CHICAGO (AP) — Two United Airlines mechanics who found failures in an engine mounting on a grounded DC-10 said Thursday that they feel the engine eventually would have fallen off the airplane.

"It gives you a funny feeling in the pit of your stomach," said mechanic Ernest Gigliotti, whose discovery may have prevented another disaster such as last Friday's Chicago crash that killed 274 persons. "If left, I think eventually it would have been a very serious condition," added Gigliotti, 31, a United mechanic for more than 10 years. "The pylon would have separated from the wing."

His fellow mechanic, 13-year veteran Lorin Schluter, agreed. "Eventually, the engine would have come off the wing," he said. A week ago, American Airlines Flight 181 crashed in Chicago, killing 274 persons, after an engine fell from the wing of the DC-10 moments after takeoff.

Gigliotti and Schluter made their discovery Tuesday after the U.S. Federal Aviation Administration had ordered immediate inspection of engine mount bolts on all McDonnell Douglas DC-10s. The two men found cracks in the pylon spar webbing — a horizontal reinforcing plate at the top of the pylon that mounts to the wing. That led the FAA to ground all such U.S.-registered jets for more extensive inspections. The United mechanics also found fasteners as well as some of the bolts in the rear

Bolt not the cause

WASHINGTON (AP) — The DC-10 bolt found on the runway near the site where an American Airlines jetliner lost an engine and crashed last Friday did not cause the accident but was broken as a result of it, an investigator said Thursday. "The bolt had broken in an overstress condition, rather than a fatigue condition," Michael Marks, chief metallurgist for the National Transportation Safety Board told the board in a briefing. "As far as can be ascertained so far, the bolt broke as a result of the accident."

mounting mechanism sheared off, and a missing bolt, Gigliotti said. United said further inspection of the DC-10 after the groundings also turned up a crack in one of two braces that support the reinforcing plate. While inspecting the rear pylon engine mount that attaches to the wing, Gigliotti said he saw metal powder which led him to believe "the bearing might have been loose or wearing out."

The aft mount stabilizes the entire engine assembly, Gigliotti said. He said he then pushed on the front of the massive engine while Schluter watched the rear pylon mount for abnormal movement. "Normally there is no side-to-side movement," Schluter said. But there was. "It looked like something was wrong. ... Then we took the panel off."

"It surprised me," said Gigliotti. "It surprised us both. We knew we had trouble." Schluter, 38, of Marengo, Ill., said the cracks in the webbing could have been caused by vibration and wear in the mount bolts.

Sl-Laurent said the unemployment insurance bureaucracy was all geared up to implement the changes Sunday.

Tens of thousands of dollars, yet unestimated, have been spent mainly on new computer programming, to prepare for the changes. The new categories of claimants would have to work longer than the standard 10 to 14 weeks to qualify for benefits.

The categories include repeaters, claiming benefits for the second time in a year; new entrants, claiming benefits after a first job; re-entrants, claiming benefits after a job preceded by a long absence from the labor force.

John McCafferty, 18, the lone survivor, was operated on for a compound leg fracture Thursday and was reported in stable condition. McCafferty, from nearby Seapoint, was thrown

Change to be reviewed

OTTAWA (CP) — At Joe Clark's request, the outgoing Liberal government has agreed to postpone restrictions on unemployment insurance benefits that were scheduled to go into effect Sunday.

Larry St-Laurent, head of the unemployment insurance program, said Thursday that officials told the new prime minister's office Monday that the changes were to go into effect just a day before he is to announce who is in the Conservative cabinet.

"We thought it only proper that the bureaucracy let him know about the coincidence," St-Laurent said.

Clark's office then decided the changes should be deferred, pending a review by the person who replaces defeated Liberal Bud Cullen, minister of employment who steered the changes through Parliament last winter. The old government agreed to the postponement.

The changes, opposed by Conservatives at the time, create new categories of insurance claimants and increase the number of weeks persons have to work before they qualify for benefits.

Jim McGrath, opposition social policy critic in the pre-election Parliament, said in a separate interview he does not think the changes should be proclaimed.

He said Conservative policy opposing the changes and recommending, instead, a two-tiered benefit plan, has not changed.

However, whether the changes are scuttled or implemented in the future depends on who Clark gives the employment and immigration portfolio to and who else is in the cabinet.

The Conservative alternative would pay lower benefits to claimants without dependents. Officials estimate this would in a year reduce benefits to about 1.8 million persons — 73 per cent of claimants — for an $850-million saving.

The government changes would prevent about 214,000 persons from claiming benefits in the first year for a saving of about $440 million, officials say.

Sl-Laurent said the unemployment insurance bureaucracy was all geared up to implement the changes Sunday.

Tens of thousands of dollars, yet unestimated, have been spent mainly on new computer programming, to prepare for the changes.

The new categories of claimants would have to work longer than the standard 10 to 14 weeks to qualify for benefits.

The categories include repeaters, claiming benefits for the second time in a year; new entrants, claiming benefits after a first job; re-entrants, claiming benefits after a job preceded by a long absence from the labor force.

EXTRA FEE PLAN VETOED

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Health Association rejected Thursday a resolution that would have permitted hospitals to charge patients an extra daily fee.

In presenting its resolution to the association's annual convention, a Powell River hospital group said hospital budget limitations imposed by the provincial government will lead to staff and service cutbacks.

The resolution said hospitals should be permitted to add a user fee to the present $4-a-day basic in-patient charge rather than let health care deteriorate. The maximum daily charge under the user-fee system would have been $10.

The association's 256 voting delegates rejected the resolution saying it would have contravened the terms of federal cost-sharing programs and might have imposed hardships on some patients.

Fix alleged in advertising

VANCOUVER (CP) — Eight radio stations and two television stations in the Vancouver area were charged Thursday with conspiring to fix advertising prices between June 30, 1978, and Dec. 1, 1977.

The combined investigation branch of the federal department of consumer and corporate affairs charges that the stations conspired to lessen competition in the sale or supply of radio and TV broadcast time for advertising.

Named in the charge are television stations BCTV and CKVU, New Westminster radio station CKNW, Vancouver radio stations CHQM, CKWX, CJOR, CJVB, CFUN and CKLG and CIBC Langley.

Also named are the sales managers of the stations at the time the alleged conspiracy took place. All the accused are to appear in court June 12.

Students honored

BURNABY, B.C. (CP) — A 21-year-old languages student who grew up in this Vancouver suburb has won the Governor General's Gold Medal as the outstanding student in the 1979 graduating class at Simon Fraser University.

Karen Marotz, who graduates with a bachelor of arts degree with a major in French and a minor in German, has won two book prizes for her academic performance.

Last summer, she worked on revisions for a lower-level French text. She is now working at the Vancouver public library.

Another student, 22-year-old Patricia Margaret Ponich of Kelowna, has won the Gordon M. Shrum Medal and a $500 prize for maintaining a high scholastic standard while at the same time participating in extra-curricular activities.

Miss Ponich, who graduates with a bachelor of arts degree in criminology, was recently named the university's female athlete of the year for 1978-79. She is a provincially-ranked volleyball player and captain of the university's team.

Sawmill walkout

100 MILE HOUSE, B.C. (CP) — About 400 employees at the Canim Lake sawmills, 30 kilometres northwest of this interior British Columbia community, walked off their jobs here Thursday morning.

The dispute began in the sawmill but workers in the planer and plywood operations joined the walkout. The striking workers are members of the International Woodworkers of America.

Details of the dispute were not available.

CRIME

MONTREAL (CP) — A 32-year-old paraplegic spent two weeks in jail here recently after he was convicted of illegally peddling pencils on city streets.

Michel Handfield says he has been arrested by police 36 times in the last two years for peddling pencils for donations on downtown streets and at subway stations.

He ignored notices ordering him to pay fines "because I couldn't afford to," he said in an interview published Thursday.

He almost didn't try to land

OWLS HEAD, Me. (AP) — James Merryman, the most experienced pilot with Downeast Airlines, was about to change his mind about landing at Owls Head shortly before his de Havilland Twin Otter crashed in heavy fog on the coast of Maine, killing 17 people, authorities said.

"I don't think we will make it; get me a clearance to Augusta," he radioed at 8:55 p.m. to the Brunswick Naval Air Station, which controls air traffic in the area.

Those were the last words heard from Merryman, 35, before the twin-engined commuter flight, en route from Boston, went down about 2.5 kilometres short of the runway Wednesday night, after striking a tall tree on the coastline.

A spokesman at the air station said the pilot's comments indicated he was considering a "missed approach" — a common procedure when the airport cannot be visually seen — and perhaps going to Augusta, not that he was in any trouble.

The 17 victims, crushed in the nose of the plane as it slammed into a rock ledge and flipped over, apparently died on impact, said Dr. Henry Ryan, state medical examiner.

John McCafferty, 18, the lone survivor, was operated on for a compound leg fracture Thursday and was reported in stable condition.

McCafferty, from nearby Seapoint, was thrown clear. He then crawled away from the still-intact fuselage, until he could not crawl any farther.

"He was scared to death," said Robert Levasseur of the Owls Head first-aid team who helped rescue McCafferty. He quoted the youth as saying:

"Be careful, I don't want to crash again. I don't want to crash again."

The crash was the worst commercial air disaster in Maine's history.

The cause was unknown, but the National Transportation Safety Board dispatched an investigating team headed by its vice-chairman, Elwood Driver, who also investigated the crash of a DC-10 that killed 274 people in Chicago last Friday.

Tory call

OTTAWA (CP) — A Toronto businessman, reported to have been asked by Joe Clark's office for advice on eliminating excess public service jobs, says he is the victim of a hoax. Steven Shaw of Steven Shaw Associates said he received a call last week from someone allegedly from the Progressive Conservative leader's office asking how the party might carry out a pledge to cut 60,000 jobs from the civil service.

PET fills Clark in

OTTAWA (CP) — Pierre Trudeau gave Joe Clark some pointers Thursday on how to be a prime minister.

But as Clark left a 60-minute meeting with Trudeau in the Liberal leader's Parliament Hill office, he refused to divulge the secrets to a waiting crowd of reporters.

The Progressive Conservative leader, who becomes prime minister Monday, said his talks with the outgoing prime minister were cordial and centred on problems related to the transition of government "and some procedural problems I face as prime minister."

The two politicians also "had a general discussion about the timing of the (Quebec independence) referendum and the future of the country."

Clark renewed his pledge to call a federal-provincial constitutional conference before the Quebec government initiates its promised referendum.

Although Clark and Trudeau will soon trade homes, they do not plan to trade offices in Parliament's Centre Block.

"It's a lovely office," Clark said as he left Trudeau's quarters. However, Clark planned to keep his more ornate office.

As Trudeau entered the meeting, he quipped that Canadians who are surprised over the change of government do not "understand the system."

"The system is devised so that there will be change," Trudeau said as he welcomed Clark to his office to discuss the politics and personal aspects of replacing one government with another.

"Anyone surprised that there is change doesn't understand the system."

Clark, who will be sworn in as Canada's 16th and youngest prime minister next Monday, responded with a chuckle.

The Trudeau-Clark

meeting follows a series of Progressive Conservative leader is conducting as he prepares to take over after 16 years of Liberal rule.

Wednesday, Clark accepted an invitation from Gov. Gen. Edward Schreyer to form a minority Progressive Conservative government.

And he had a private chat with New Democrat Leader Ed Broadbent, leader of one of the minor parties that could keep his government in office.

Clark said he is holding the meetings to maintain "the tradition of civility" that has marked parliamentary relationships between the country's political leaders.

Clark and his cabinet are to be sworn in at a precedent-setting televised ceremony at Government House.

Following that, Trudeau is expected to abandon the prime minister's Harrington Lake retreat and take up residence in the official Opposition leader's house in exclusive Rockcliffe Park.

NEWS IN BRIEF

MONTREAL (CP) —

Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, now repentant Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorists, almost met the victim of their October, 1970, kidnapping in an interview on British television last year, the couple's lawyer said Thursday.

Mrs. Cossette-Trudel also wrote a letter of apology to former British trade commissioner James Cross, who became a top civil servant in London after his 60-day kidnapping by the FLQ's liberation cell.

Defence lawyer Serge Menard made the disclosure at the Cossette-Trudels' presentence hearing in an attempt to prove the couple regretted having caused Cross so much anguish while holding him in a northend Montreal apartment.

The couple pleaded guilty Thursday to kidnapping, forcible detention and conspiracy in the Cross abduction Thursday and were also found guilty of extortion.

The Cossette-Trudels gave several media interviews last fall before returning to Quebec from exile in Paris on Dec. 13.

At the time, the independent Thames Television station in London contacted Cross and the Cossette-Trudels about the possibility of an interview, Menard said.

They just want respect

THE HAGUE (Reuter) — Atlantic pact foreign ministers, for the first time in a NATO document, called Thursday for "respect for the legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

But France thwarted a move to have the 15-country alliance declare the Egyptian-Israeli peace treaty to be an important step toward an over-all Middle East settlement, diplomatic sources said.

The United States and the other NATO allies favored inclusion of such endorsement of the treaty in the communique issued at the end of the two-day foreign ministers' meeting.

But Jean Francois Poncelet, the French minister, told U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance that, if this were included, France wanted a separate paragraph in the communique to set out its dissenting point of view, the sources said.

The communique paid tribute to President Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin, but stopped short of any direct reference to the treaty signed earlier this year.

It said lasting peace in the region called for all parties concerned, including Palestinian representatives, to take part in working out a comprehensive settlement.

This must be based on 1967 and 1973 UN Security Council resolutions, which called for Israeli withdrawal from occupied Arab territories, and on "respect for legitimate rights of the Palestinian people."

He says he'll really burn

OTTAWA (CP) — Edward Wrobel, a Polish immigrant, began demonstrating outside the Polish embassy today, threatening to go on a hunger strike and burn himself unless his wife and children are allowed to join him in Canada.

But Janusz Zielinski, an embassy spokesman, said Wrobel has not yet formally applied to have his family emigrate. Wrobel, who lives in Edmonton, said in an interview that he met embassy officials this week and was told to go back to Edmonton to wait for his wife.

Wrobel, 29, a laborer, said he plans to begin a two-week hunger strike Monday and will wait until his wife arrives. He had told embassy officials that if he receives no promises his wife will be allowed to leave Poland "I will burn myself."

An external affairs official said Wrobel made a similar threat in a letter to External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson in February and was told to apply to the Polish embassy to "regularize his illegal immigrant status under Polish law."

Wrobel said he left Poland for Austria on a holiday and then approached the Canadian embassy in Vienna to emigrate to Canada. He arrived in Canada about 18 months ago.

The external affairs spokesman said Wrobel was warned by Canadian officials in Vienna that his move would be considered a violation of Polish law and that he must expect to be separated from his wife and children, Jack, 4, and Martin, 3.

Gas battle predicted

TORONTO (CP) — As natural gas becomes more costly, conflicts among Canada, the United States and Mexico could arise when it comes to marketing new gas, an expert from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology said Thursday.

Henry Jacoby told delegates to the world gas conference that the key to the future is flexibility in price policy.

"There is a good chance that we (the U.S.) are moving out of the era of regulation and induced shortage where natural gas could demand a premium and where arbitrary rules about value suggest themselves as the logical basis for trade," Jacoby said.

"The elements of conflict are there to be sure." The U.S. government will determine some price which will make buying gas attractive and buyers won't pay more than that price for gas imported from Canada and Mexico, he said.

Jacoby told a later news conference he favors continuing the current system of energy trade agreements among the North American countries over any other form of common market arrangement.

"There are some deals that are to the advantage of Canada and Mexico," he said. "If we just don't miss those, that's as much as we can expect. I think we do pretty well."

He told reporters that self-sufficiency in energy is possible for Canada and the U.S. but the capital, social and environmental costs would make it impractical.

Twins apart, recovering

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Siamese twins Lisa and Elsie Hansen, joined at their heads before doctors separated them in a 16-hour operation, were described as in critical but stable condition Thursday.

"And that's good, quite good at this point," a hospital spokesman said.

He said the 19-month-old girls were "active and aware; sometimes crying, sometimes looking around, and sleeping a lot."

The complicated surgery Tuesday was described as the first successful operation of its type.

Few people other than doctors, nurses and the girls' parents are allowed to see the twins, who for the first time in their lives lie side-by-side in separate cribs in the University of Utah Medical Centre's intensive care unit. They breathe oxygen through plastic face masks and have several tubes attached to their bodies. The openings left by surgery are covered with folds of skin from the girls' heads and legs, and that is covered with white helmet-like bandages.

They may need additional plastic surgery, doctors said, but they will have a normal forehead with a line of hair. However, they probably will have to wear wigs.

The girls' parents, David and Patricia Hansen, who have been in seclusion since the surgery, can be with their daughters "any time they want to see them" the hospital spokesman said.

During the operation, neurosurgeons were surprised to find the girls' brains were joined in the rear near the bottom portions. Doctors had said the brains were separate and that the girls shared only blood vessels.

HOWARD URGING PURCHASE OF BCRIC SHARES

Frank Howard, MLA for Skeena, is urging every British Columbian to obtain their five shares in the B.C. Resources Investment Corporation.

Howard said, "It is important for all of us to obtain the five shares in BCRIC because that shares not applied for will be redeemed by BCRIC and cancelled, reducing the degree of B.C. ownership of the Corporation."

"It is true," said Howard, "that these five-share certificates do not represent real ownership, but plans are underway to ask people to donate their shares to trusts for a variety of purposes. These trusts will represent real ownership as the five-share certificates can be accumulated in 100 share lots for voting purposes at annual meetings in BCRIC."

"Figures released by BCRIC show that about 1.4 million British Columbians have not yet applied for their shares and with the deadline for applications being mid-June there is a sense of urgency involved," said Howard.

Weekly figures released by BCRIC show that as of May 25, applications on behalf of 1,206,398 persons had been made for five free shares. These applications for 6,031,990 shares represent 50.3 per cent of the 12,000,000 free shares available.

David Helliwell, president of BCRIC, said that up to May 25 British Columbia had also applied to purchase 2,961,255 additional shares at $6 each, yielding gross proceeds of $17,767,530.

Applications for shares are available at all banks, credit unions, investment dealers and trust companies in the province until June 15.

Helliwell said that the volume share applications has been increasing in recent days and that he expects it to continue to climb as the June 15 deadline nears.

Inside the brand new CP Air jet, passengers can finally store their small baggage above their seats instead of under them. The new 737 plane took its maiden trip on Thursday by way of Terrace. The plane isn't any bigger, but, like a new car, it feels better. "It's so shiny-new there is less wind resistance," says the co-pilot. It has a bigger engine, a 737 200 advanced, which is the same as a 727 engine. This is also the first of its kind. It has bigger fuel tanks so it can go farther and it can go 2,000 feet higher than the usual planes. CP Air is also very safety conscious about the new plane.

FOR CARIBOU

Fears the worst

TORONTO (CP) — A University of Calgary biologist says he fears the worst for caribou in the Baker Lake, N.W.T., area because any proposals designed to protect them are based on incomplete information.

Dr. Valerius Geist, a professor of environmental sciences and an expert in animal behavior, said Thursday prolonged stress could result in organ damage or death to caribou.

He was testifying in federal court as an expert witness in a landmark native rights case over aboriginal rights and resource development in a 70,000-square-kilometre area of land located 1,600 kilometres north of Winnipeg.

The Inuit are fighting to preserve a centuries-old tradition of hunting caribou, their main source of food, by seeking an injunction to prohibit the federal government from issuing mining permits in the area.

The struggle pits 113 Baker Lake Inuit residents against the federal government and several foreign and Canadian-owned mining companies.

"I believe that any proposed control measures designed to protect the caribou in the Baker Lake area from future harassment by mineral exploration activity and associated aircraft activity are inadequate due to the fact that they are based entirely on faulty methodology," Geist testified.

He said behavioral responses are not always an accurate indicator that harassment is occurring because "a harassed animal may respond internally but exhibit no external change."

Those internal responses could include an increase in the animal's heart rate and blood sugar and may lead to death or illness.

Although Geist said he suspects that activities related to mineral exploration will affect the movement patterns of caribou, he pointed out that no scientific data exists to support the theory. Inuit witnesses have testified that 10 years of uranium mining and exploration in the area have disrupted traditional caribou migration patterns and threatened their livelihood.

Leaflets are part of a jurisdictional dispute

by Linda Purschke

Fallout from a province-wide "attempt to agree upon jurisdiction" between the British Columbia Building Trades Council (BTC) and the International Woodworkers of America was felt in Terrace during the last few days, as members of the BTC distributed leaflets to IWA members on the job.

Bill Gannon, spokesman for local members of the BTC said the union has been trying to maintain strength in the face of increasing competition from the IWA in the construction industry.

"They're getting into areas that have traditionally been in our jurisdiction," says Gannon. "They're getting into the construction of mills and IWA contractors are getting involved with mining construction and building schools, etc."

Leaflets distributed to IWA members in Terrace reiterated the theme of IWA involvement in areas formerly under what the trades council consider their jurisdiction.

"Today, the IWA contractors, and not the building trades have some of the largest construction contracts, in terms of work under way, in construction," says the leaflet. The BTC contends jurisdiction of the IWA is designated by the "Goldenberg report", which was agreed to by the Canadian Labor Congress. This report lays out jurisdiction boundaries between the two unions says the BTC, and is referred to in the leaflet.

New construction falls within the traditional jurisdiction of the building trades unions," says the excerpt. "Woodworkers jurisdiction extends to maintenance, repairs and construction improvements in existing mills."

Gannon also contends management is attempting to use the situation to cause strife between the two unions. This theme is reiterated in the leaflet given to IWA members.

"The employers are sharply increasing their use of in-plant or industrial forces, pitting the building trades and the large industrial unions against one another," says the leaflet.

"It's all part of the right to work for less campaign," said Gannon. "It's the bosses natural work. If he can keep the workers divided, he can gain."

When asked to comment on allegations by the BTC that the discord between the BTC and the IWA of management tactics, Bill Hutchison, business agent for the IWA, said Gannon could "have a point", but added that IWA members who were participating in the construction programs involving IWA were organized by the IWA without any involvement by management.

"Just about every union has problems with jurisdiction," said Hutchison.

Hutchison stated that IWA members who received the leaflets from the BTC members and who contact him "wondered what the pamphlets were all about."

"You don't start at the bottom to clarify these things, you work from the top," said Hutchison. "Their officers should be dealing with our officers."

Gannon stated the BTC had so far not been able to resolve the matter with executives in the IWA.

"I wouldn't want to pinpoint anyone," Gannon continued, "but the B.C. Federation of Labor and the Canadian Labor Congress have tried to resolve the situation. So far the construction leaders have been reluctant to accept the position put forward by them."

"I think the regular membership will accept our position. We don't try to organize in mills," he concluded.

Hutchison stated the matter went beyond the authority of the local IWA and said the question required a decision by regional and international leaders of the IWA.

"They claim we have organized people in their jurisdiction. Maybe we have, maybe we haven't," Hutchison explained. "Boundaries are just unclear."

EDITORIAL

There is a growing interest among both native peoples and educators in reviving the language of the original inhabitants of this country.

The University of Victoria has found that faced with the probability that their languages are going to disappear, at least some native Indians are enrolling in a unique program there.

This one-year Native Indian Language Diploma Program is an attempt to teach those who still speak their own language to teach it to others. It started in 1974 and this year 12 native Indians have re-entered the educational system, some of them after long absences.

The 12 students spend part of their time collecting stories, place names and cultural information and using this for readers, dictionaries and maps. While the program and the students are only in the first stages of developing systems and ways of doing things, what they are doing is using the most advanced language learning techniques.

One of the problems native Indians are encountering in teaching their language to those who did not grow up with it is that they don't have the grammar, the rules of the language, set out in any formal way.

In the past, native Indian languages were orally transmitted without written instruction. The native tradition was primarily an oral tradition the European disrupted, even going so far as to make it illegal for a people to learn their own language.

It is the result of the ban in the residential school of native people's language that has left them in the situation they are in today.

Programs like the one at the University of Victoria are working with local programs like the one here in Skeena at the Nishga Elementary Secondary School in New Aliyash to reintroduce native people to their own culture.

At NESS the students, both the Nishga students and the students from Nass Camp who are not native Indian, learn the Nishga language.

It is an ambitious program with a number of people, both Indian and non-Indian co-operating to teach natives who have not learned their mother tongue at home to learn it in school.

The question you might well ask is why go to all this trouble. The answer is simple. It is in the native Indian language that a great deal of their heritage rests. Their culture is passed down in that language and if the language dies so does the culture.

But wouldn't it be better if the natives were assimilated into the white man's world? Not Every time a culture, a way of life dies, we all lose. It is the variety of cultures and points of view that enrich us, give us perspective, show us ways of thinking.

As it is important to foster and advance the bilingual nature of this country, the French-English duality, it is also important to bring out the diversity of native philosophy and view of the world.

After all, we should realize they lived here for generations and in harmony with the land far greater than what we see today.

We would be well advised to listen to what these people have to say and in their own language.

A PROBLEM

A look at Zimbabwe

By JOHN WARD

NEW YORK (CP) — The black-led government in Zimbabwe-Rhodesia poses problems for the United States, Britain and the entire British Commonwealth.

The government of Bishop Abel Muzorewa, the new prime minister, is in effect a blackwhite coalition. The new 17-member cabinet includes five whites, among them Ian Smith, the former prime minister.

The coalition is the product of a deal negotiated by Smith and moderate black leaders last year. Under the new constitutional set-up, 28 seats of the 100-seat legislature are reserved for whites.

The white minority also wields considerable clout in the cabinet, controlling the ministries of agriculture, finance, justice and transport. Muzorewa reserved the ministry of combined operations and defence — which controls the war against black nationalist guerrillas — to himself.

Smith is serving as minister without portfolio.

The government came out of a series of elections staged last month. The voting was held up by Smith as a demonstration that power is being peacefully turned over to the black majority after 88 years of white rule.

But the election results are under a cloud. Dabani Sithole, Muzorewa's principal political opponent within Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, has charged that the voting was rigged. His party won 12 seats, but the members are boycotting the legislature and refused to take up the two cabinet posts set aside for them.

Muzorewa and Smith insist that the elections were free and above board.

Joshua Nkomo, one of the black guerrilla leaders who has led the hit-and-run war against Smith and his white colleagues for years, has dismissed the elections and the new government as fraudulent.

Nkomo says Muzorewa's government is really a group of whites hiding behind black front men. He and Robert Mugabe, the other guerrilla leader, have vowed to continue their war until real majority rule comes in.

Now that the new government is installed, Muzorewa is likely to push for elimination of the economic sanctions imposed when Rhodesia first broke away from Britain. The new prime minister will argue that majority rule is in place and that the country deserves recognition.

Until the election of Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher in Britain, that country stood with the U.S. on the Rhodesian question. The two countries demanded elections involving all parties in the dispute as a price for recognition and the removal of the sanctions.

But Mrs. Thatcher appears much more sympathetic to the new regime in Salisbury than was former prime minister James Callaghan.

When U.S. State Secretary Cyrus Vance flew to London last week to discuss the issue, he received no more than a promise of delay from Mrs. Thatcher's new government.

In Washington, President Carter's pressure for the removal of the embargo but if he does, he may find the U.S. getting the cold shoulder from black Africa, which refuses to recognize the legitimacy of the Muzorewa government.

Don Jamieson, Canada's outgoing external affairs minister, has predicted serious troubles for the Commonwealth if Britain recognizes the new regime in Salisbury.

The next Commonwealth conference in Lusaka, Zambia, in August will likely focus on the issue. Jamieson has said the meeting will be a difficult one.

If Britain and the U.S. were to recognize Zimbabwe-Rhodesia and lift the trade sanctions, there would be another problem. The sanctions were imposed by a resolution of the UN Security Council and to act unilaterally would be politically embarrassing and give the Soviet Union an advantage to exploit at the UN and in Africa.

FARMERS NERVOUS

Waiting for the weather

By ROD EDWARDS

WINNIPEG (CP) — The unsettled weather over Manitoba's vegetable growing districts is giving Don Kroeker "rumblings in his stomach."

"I've had these worried rumblings in my stomach for the last week or two," said Kroeker, one of many vegetable growers who are behind in their planting because of mainly cool, wet weather.

"But the situation is basically unclear at this point. It still could be a good year."

Burt Sandercock, chief of the horticultural section of the Manitoba department of agriculture, said in an interview Wednesday only about one-quarter of the province's vegetable crops have been planted.

Sandercock said the situation is not critical yet but it will be unless warm, dry weather arrives in the next week or two.

"For many farmers the delays so far will mean about a week off the market," he said.

"Over-all that isn't too significant but for individuals it could be costly."

The $3-million vegetable industry in the province markets its products mostly in Saskatchewan, Manitoba and northwestern Ontario. Some are exported to northern areas of the United States.

By far the largest crop in Manitoba is potatoes, taking up about 37,000 acres with other vegetables occupying between 2,600 and 2,700 acres.

Kroeker, who operates

8,000 acres sown to potatoes and other vegetables in the Winkler and Portage la

Prairie districts, said farmers "certainly are scared."

"On some vegetables, the planting time is over...," he said. "There will be a fairly substantial decrease on onion acreage."

But Kroeker added that there still is "a bit of time" left on other crops before a final deadline is reached.

He said most farmers are about a week behind other years with planting. But once they do get into full swing there actually could be higher supplies of some vegetables.

"We had a number of growers planning to add crops and increase crops this year," Kroeker said.

"The current situation could affect those intentions. But in a number of crops it still will likely be a record. Celery, I'm sure, will be a new record. I still expect broccoli and cauliflower to be new records, carrots probably will be but onions definitely will not."

One area of particular concern is with celery. Kroeker said celery transplants are flown in from California and once they arrive they should be planted within four or five days or "you might have to dump them."

"Any extended spell of wet weather will hurt the transplanting situation and certainly a couple of weeks of bad weather would be extremely serious."

There still is plenty of time for planting the major crop, potatoes, said Kroeker.

"We have planted potatoes three weeks later than this and got a reasonable crop."

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS

LONDON (AP) — Elton John returned home from a successful concert tour of the Soviet Union on Thursday and said: "It was incredible. I felt like Bob Dylan."

John, 32, arrived at London's Heathrow Airport following eight concerts in Leningrad and Moscow, the biggest Soviet tour ever arranged for a major Western rock star.

He told reporters: "The last show (in Moscow) was probably one of the best concerts I've ever given in my life, simply because the kids were marvelous. They inspired me."

"We've been invited to return to Russia and we will definitely be going, although I don't know when."

British newspapers speculated Soviet authorities allowed John's appearances as a public relations exercise before next year's Olympic Games in Moscow.

John, chairman of Watford Football Club in the English soccer league, toured some of the Olympic sites.

"The Russians told us that they are interested in a wide spectrum of artists. They want Paul McCartney, Eric Clapton, Neil Diamond, Nana Mouskouri and Pink Floyd."

"In fact, they told us the only reason more people have not played there is because they simply haven't asked permission."

HARTFORD (AP) — The capital Connecticut has received a $12 cheque from Texas Gov. William Clements to cover the cost of 12 gallons of gasoline he was given when his rented car ran dry during a visit earlier this month.

"There is certainly something ironic about the governor of Texas being out of gas in Hartford," Clements said in a letter received Wednesday.

"Please assure your fellow citizens of Hartford that if they come to Texas and pay us a visit that I will assure them of a plentiful gas supply."

"I am not sure where I am going to get (the plentiful supply). We are in trouble down here, too."

OTTAWA OFFBEAT

BY RICHARD JACKSON

Ottawa, Unless Prime Minister Clark fumigates the public service woodwork, members of Parliament, especially the new Conservative freshmen, will be in for some disturbing disillusionment.

They'll learn, as rank-and-file members of all parties have known since former Prime Minister Pearson, true to his public service background and training, elevated the bureaucrats in prestige and power, that mere parliamentarians don't have much clout.

Important at home respected perhaps envied, they arrive here and discover that individually they're very small cogs in an enormous machine.

And unless Prime Minister Clark throws some of the levers of this machine—and does it swiftly and decisively—the new MP's will find that real power is badly unbalanced.

As the federal establishment has operated these last 16 Liberal years, the expanding—now topping 600,000—tightly-knit public service is rigidly bossed by some 500 departmental deputy ministers, commission chairman and Crown Corporation presidents.

All of them, without exception, Liberals. And with the Conservatives in power through only five of the last 44 years, party loyalty runs deep from the top of the bureaucracy down through the rank and file.

From deputy minister and crown corporation president to clerk, steno and cleaning staff they have all been appointed—they knew somebody of influence and that's what counted—and an enormous number bank in the comfort of public service protection. They're safe.

But the men at the top like former Postmaster General Bryce Mackasey, the member of the Trudeau cabinet who turned unemployment insurance into a giant giveaway, sent to his $90,000-a-year reward as Air Canada board chairman and demanding a $30,000 pension on top of his indexed parliamentary pension, are far from secure.

Parliamentarians like to tell themselves, especially the newcomers, that they, not the public service, initiate, process and pass legislation.

But unless Mr. Clark breaks it, the power will remain firmly in the grip of the public service because it prepares the legislation for cabinet's scrutiny and presentation in the first place.

Then after cabinet accepts it and Parliament rubber stamps it, this same public service power elite puts it into operation.

So with the public service having the first and last crack at it, Parliament functions realistically as only a middleman—unless Mr. Clark quickly changes the play and the players.

For as the way things have been—and former Prime Minister Diefenbaker muffed the one Conservative chance to change them—the public service, especially the senior ranks, goes serenely on from election to election, relatively undisturbed.

They watch ministers come and go, Parliaments change, even governments, if seldom parties move along, and prevail as the appointed "inner" permanent administration.

Who, in the real political know, ever has said these outrageous things?

Well, among those who have cried out against the enduring supremacy of the senior public service have been John Diefenbaker and such former cabinet ministers, Liberal and Conservative, as Alvin Hamilton, John Turner, George McElraith, Paul Hellyer, Arthur Laing and Senator Donald Cameron.

Senator Cameron, a respected Liberal termed the senior bureaucracy the "secret government" ruling by Pearson-ordained "divine right."

He charged that these "faceless men," as he termed them, are the masters, not the servants of the taxpayers and their elected governments.

And he was warned that they have forged "an iron ring of self-perpetuating power" with the whole nation in its grip.

Perhaps Joe Clark will be the one to break it, restore Parliament's power and the self-respect of the MP's. But it won't be easy. The Liberals will scream to high Heaven if there is anything approaching a careful housecleaning that threatens their hidden control through the public service in the woodwork.

CONSUMER COMMENT

If you or someone you know is about to have a baby, you may be looking around the stores for those tiny baby rattles that were once so popular for newborns. Chances are you won't find tiny rattles being sold these days.

You see, government regulations now prohibit the sale of any rattle that is small enough to be taken into the baby's mouth, to avoid accidents which could lead to suffocation.

Regulations also exist for the sale of pacifiers. Nowadays, pacifiers that are sold in Canada must meet certain standards for strength and durability. As well, they must have a sufficiently large and rigid guard to prevent the nipple from going too far into the mouth.

Pacifiers must not break down into small components that could be swallowed, and if a cord is attached, it must not be more than fourteen inches long so that it can't be put around the baby's neck. Pacifiers are now sold sterile and made of non-toxic materials.

These regulations exist to help prevent accidents that occur among infants. They do not, however, eliminate the need for parents to check the condition of their child's rattles and pacifiers regularly. Even products that are safe at the time they're purchased can become hazardous after months of constant use.

So, now you can go out and buy rattles and pacifiers; confident that they are safer now than ever before. And remember, once they're in use, to check them regularly and discard any that are broken or degraded, to keep them safe for the baby's pleasure.

Terrace hosts visitors

by Linda Purschke

Thirteen students from Inuvik, Northwest Territories, have been guests in Terrace for the past few days as part of a 10-day tour of northern British Columbia and Alberta.

Ranging in age from 17 to 24, the students attend classes in Inuvik. The group flew from Inuvik to Edmonton and then travelled by bus to Jasper. From Jasper, they enjoyed the two-day train ride to Terrace and arrived here on Tuesday.

While in the area, the students toured Samson's Poultry Farm in Terrace and Alcan in Kitimat. On Friday they will be going to New Aiyansh, and over the weekend the group will travel to K'san and the Kispox Rodeo.

Transportation costs for the trip were financed by the Open House Canada program, as part of the Secretary of State. The students sponsored a wide range of activities, such as car washes and bingos, to help pay the rest of the cost involved.

The Kermode Friendship Centre has provided billets for the students while they are in Terrace and has also helped to organize the various side trips the students have taken. The group begins the return trip to Inuvik on Monday.

B.C. BRIEFS

LYTTON, B.C. (CP) — The British Columbia Government Employees Union is seeking an investigation by the Workers' Compensation Board after the Lytton ferry's second accident in less than a month.

A spokesman said the union also plans to investigate safety conditions on the ferry which crosses the Fraser River at Lytton. On Tuesday, the ferry became tangled in its guide wires. On May 3, it broke free from the wires and was carried to Boston Bar. There were no injuries in either incident.

On board the ferry Tuesday were two operators and members of a highways ministry bridge crew.

Darcy Byers, Merritt district manager for the highways ministry, said the ferry was operating without a line.

Bennett opens terminal

BEAR COVE, B.C. (CP) — Premier Bill Bennett travelled to this northern Vancouver Island hamlet Thursday to open a new $2.5 million ferry terminal that will cut four hours off the ferry run from the island to Prince Rupert.

The new terminal, near Port Hardy, replaces one at Kelsey Bay, about 115 kilometres to the southeast.

Construction of the Bear Cove terminal took seven months. Dock facilities are designed to handle the ferry Queen of Prince Rupert and the Queen of Surrey, which Premier Bennett said might soon be coming out of mothballs for use on the Prince Rupert run.

Charles Gallagher, general manager of the British Columbia Ferries Corporation, also said he expects the Queen of Surrey to be reactivated for next summer.

A $5 million refit has already started on the ferry which has a larger passenger and vehicle capacity than the Queen of Prince Rupert.

MLAs to get pay raise

VANCOUVER (CP) — The royal commission report on electoral reform recommends salary increases of $3,000 a year plus increases in tax-free expense allowance for British Columbia's 57 MLAs.

The report, which has not been tabled in the legislature, recommends salaries be increased to $19,000 a year. MLAs also receive $8,000 tax free for expenses and the report recommends an increase in the expense allowance based on the size of a riding and the distance from Victoria.

The report also recommends that B.C. follow other provinces and remove the automatic voting privilege for British subjects, who are allowed to vote after a year's residency in Canada. This would mean only Canadian citizens will be allowed to vote in future B.C. elections.

ALERT BAY, B.C. (CP) — The father of an 11-year-old girl who died Jan. 22 from a ruptured appendix and peritonitis testified Thursday that the doctor in charge was called twice before came to the hospital on the night of the child's death.

Richard Smith said he was at the hospital the night his daughter Renee died and told an inquest that he had never seen his daughter in as much pain.

The father said Dr. Jack Pickup ordered nurses to give Renee two needles for the pain but the doctor did not go to St. George's Hospital in this community on Cormorant Island off northern Vancouver Island until the second time he was called.

Pickup examined Renee when he did arrive but found his stethoscope was not working, Smith said. Then oxygen equipment was connected for the girl but the first tank was empty and a second one had to be ordered.

Smith said when he asked Pickup what was wrong, the doctor said Renee's breathing had stopped.

"Can you get her heart going again," Smith said he asked.

"I can try," he quoted the doctor as replying.

Smith said Pickup pumped the girl's heart three times and then left the room.

Elizabeth Nelson, the girl's aunt, said she was visiting her niece twice when Pickup came in to examine her.

She said she asked him if he was going to operate.

"He said his impression when he first saw her was that he would have to operate for appendicitis but was glad that he hadn't done so," Mrs. Nelson said.

Leonard Smith, the girl's uncle, who was looking after her while the parents were on vacation when the girl became ill, said he did not have to be convinced that Renee should have been taken to the hospital.

She was admitted to hospital Jan. 18 and Smith said that while she was able to walk he had to assist her.

Pickup had testified earlier that he had to pressure the uncle to have her admitted to hospital and said Smith had refused to allow an operation.

HIS WIFE SAID

'Go back there'

CHARLOTTE, N.C. (AP) — Jerry McGee, who was discouraged and considered leaving the tour, responded to a pep talk from his wife with an 11-under-par 61 that created a remarkable situation Thursday in the first round of the $350,000 Kemper Open golf tournament.

Craig Stadler, who played about an hour in front of McGee, chipped in three times on the way to a 62, or 10 under par—a record by two shots on the 7,160-yard Quail Hollow Country Club course. He was being interviewed by relays of local television reporters when McGee rolled in a 45-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole to go 11 under.

Stadler could only shrug helplessly. "I birdied No. 15 and was five ahead of him," he said. "When I was playing 18, I was two ahead. When I got in here he tied me. And now I'm behind."

EXPOS WIN AGAIN

Three makes a first

Montreal Expos shut out Philadelphia for the third game in a row Thursday, edging the Phillies 1-0 behind Scott Sanderson's six-hit pitching and Warren Cromartie's first-inning sacrifice fly.

It marked the first time in the Expos' 11-year existence that their pitchers have hurled three consecutive shutouts and gave Montreal a three-game lead in baseball's National League East over the slumping Phillies, who have won the division title the last three years.

Andre Dawson led off the bottom of the first with a double off Larry Christenson. He took third on Rodney Scott's bunt and scored on Cromartie's fly ball.

The Expos have won nine of their last 11 games while the Phillies have lost four in a row and 10 of 13.

In Los Angeles, Steve Garvey drove in four runs with a homer, double and single and Dave Lopes hit three doubles as the Dodgers won 12-10, saddling San Francisco Giants with their sixth successive setback.

In St. Louis, Keith Hernandez hit a three-run homer in the first inning and George Hendrick followed with a solo blast, sparking a 17-hit attack that powered the Cardinals to a 9-0 triumph over New York Mets.

And in San Diego, Dave Winfield's two-run homer carried the Padres to their fifth straight victory, 3-1 over Atlanta Braves. Eric Rasmussen went the first seven innings for the winners, giving up four hits.

Rollie Fingers pitched two hitless innings in relief. Jose Cruz broke up a scoreless game with a three-run homer in the sixth inning to lead Houston Astros into first place in the NL West Division with a 3-0 victory over Cincinnati Reds.

The Reds dropped one game behind the Astros, who swept the Reds in a three-game series for the first time since 1971.

Tim Lincecum's two-out, bases-loaded single in the 10th inning gave Pittsburgh Pirates their fifth straight victory, 4-3 over Chicago Cubs.

Pat Underwood of Detroit Tigers pitched 8 1-3 innings of three-hit ball in his major league debut to outduel his older brother, Tom, and beat Toronto Blue Jays 1-0 in an American League game.

Pat, 22, allowed a leadoff double by Rico Carty in the fifth inning and a single by Dan Ainge in the eighth, then was replaced by Dave Tobik after Alfredo Griffin hit a one-out double in the ninth in the game at Toronto. John Hiller, a native of Toronto, got the final out to earn his fourth save. Pat had four strikeouts and walked one batter.

The 25-year-old Tom Underwood, 0-7, allowed six hits, walked two and struck out six. But Jerry Morales jumped on his first pitch of the eighth inning and sent his fourth home run of the year over the left-centre field wall. In an American League afternoon game in Minnnesota, Ron Jackson drove in four runs as the Twins routed Oakland A's 13-2. Jackson hit a two-run single in a four-run fourth inning and belted a two-run homer in the eighth.

Beaudry watches the ball sail by

A game of wait

The Skeena Cedar Kings simply outlasted Williams Moving and Storage to come up with an extra inning 1-0 victory in a tense pitcher's duel in Terrace Mens Fastball action at Riverside Park Thursday night.

Both Denby Page for the Cedar Kings and Williams' R.J. Findley pitched near flawless ball, and at the end of the regulation seven innings of play, the teams were still scoreless.

Williams Moving and Storage never got a man past first base the entire game, but the Cedar Kings didn't fare much better in the first seven innings. Dave Sharpe made it as far as third base in the fourth inning, but the Kings couldn't drive him in.

With the game still a scoreless tie at the end of seven, extra innings were needed. Williams couldn't manage a baserunner in their half of the eighth, then the Cedar Kings came to bat.

D. Coxford led things off for the Kings in their half of the eighth with a base on balls, then stole second.

Another stolen base got him to third, then he was driven in by D. Popp's bloop single to give the Cedar Kings the only run of the game, and a hard fought 1-0 victory over Williams Moving and Storage.

Denby Page chalked up eight strikeouts, and allowed just two hits in winning the game for the Cedar Kings. R.J. Findley was almost as good in a losing cause for Williams Moving and Storage, as he allowed the Cedar Kings just four hits the entire game.

Parent finally says out

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bernie Parent, one of the National Hockey League's all-time great goaltenders, announced his retirement Thursday after 14 years in the nets.

Parent, whose goaltending helped the Flyers win Stanley Cups in 1973-74 and 1974-75, suffered a severe eye injury Feb. 17 in a game against New York Rangers at the Spectrum.

He did not play the last month of the regular season or in the playoffs.

Parent, 34, was injured when a team-mate accidentally poked his stick through an eyehole in the goalie's mask. He spent a week in the hospital and has been under treatment ever since.

Before being injured, the Montreal native played 38 games last season, recording four shutouts. Parent had 69 goals scored against him last season for a 2.70 goals against average.

The five-foot-10, 187-pound goalie suffered an ankle injury in 1972 and missed an entire season in 1975 because of a neck disc operation that some say permanently robbed him of his great reflexes.

"Ever since the injury happened, I've been hoping for a good report from the doctors," Parent said. "I'm only 34 and I wanted to play at least five more years. But they tell me I can't."

The sad-faced goaltender added: "I feel badly about the whole thing, but all good things must come to an end. I have many pleasant memories, especially those two Stanley Cups."

Flyers' general manager Keith Allen said Parent had given the Flyers "some of the greatest goaltending ever seen anywhere."

"We'd have never won the two Stanley Cups without him. In addition to being an outstanding goaltender, Bernie is a fine, fine person."

Parent once predicted he could continue playing until he was 38. "A goaltender can play as long as his eyes are good," he cautioned prophetically at the time.

"It's no secret he's had a disabling injury," said Dr. Edward Viner, the Flyers' team physician, in April. "It is legitimate to call him disabled permanently from an insurance standpoint."

Viner's pessimism seemed based upon the danger of further injury to the eye. "We are concerned that a future blow could further damage the lens and worsen

the secondary glaucoma," Viner said.

Parent set NHL records for games started and won in 1973-74 and for playoff shutouts the following season. He tied with Tony Esposito in 1973-74 for the Vezina Trophy, representing the lowest goals-against average.

Parent twice led the league in shutouts for a season with 12. In 1975, he won the Vezina with a 2.03 goals-against average. He twice won the Conn Smythe trophy as the most valuable player of the playoffs.

The Flyers obtained Parent from Boston Bruins in the 1967 expansion draft.

After the Flyers traded him to the Toronto Maple Leafs, Parent became the first NHL player to jump to the new World Hockey Association and played for the Philadelphia Blazers in 1972-73.

The Flyers reacquired Parent in 1973 from Toronto, which still had his NHL rights.

Some just want records

VANCOUVER (CP) — Phil Funnell, the self-styled marathon man of motorcycling, believes he has motored his way into the Guinness Book of World Records by riding his bike as far south and as far north as possible by road.

The 42-year-old Vancouver businessman, who in January completed the southern half of his 46,000-kilometre journey that took him through the two Americas, arrived back here in April from the northern portion of his tour.

However, unlike Peter Fonda and Dennis Hopper in the film Easy Rider, he wasn't searching for America. He was merely looking for a new challenge.

"The challenge has been successfully accomplished," he said in a recent interview.

"It's made me much more satisfied with life. There isn't anything that matters except enjoying life because life is so short."

The stocky, London-born Funnell, equipped with electricheated and down-filled clothes and three weeks of emergency supplies, left here March 23 on a ferry to Haines, Alaska.

From there, he fought snowdrifts, arctic winds and extreme cold as he rode through Whitehorse and Dawson City up to Inuvik and Tuktoyaktuk in the Northwest Territories.

From Dawson City to the coast and back he was on the new Dempster Highway, the gravel road which provides the first road link to the Canadian Arctic.

In Tuktoyaktuk, the northernmost Eskimo village in the Northwest Territories, Funnell stayed one night at the home of Ed Gruben, who had entertained Dutch explorer Willi de Roos during his arctic yacht voyage last year.

Funnell, who already has ridden around the world twice, says he plans to apply for a listing in the Guinness book as the first motorcyclist to travel as close to the North and South poles as possible

They ran to help

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Cancer Society is more than $1,000 richer because of a recent run by four high school students over a course of more than 42 kilometres.

As members of the Woodlands Secondary School marathon squad, the four students trained for five months with their coach, Glen Wharram, for the National Capital Marathon in Ottawa.

Duncan Atkinson, 16, Peter Lashley, 17, Linda Gorella, 17, and Richard Mohorovich, 18, all completed the run.

"That's a great accomplishment," Wharram says. "This team has worked for two hours each day, including their weekends, to get in shape."

Lashley, a Grade 11 student, says the trick is being in tune with your body.

"A lot of times you have to fight to stay in the race."

Wharram, a history teacher, also competed in the race — in less than three hours — followed by the team's assistant coach, Kurt Bartsch, 38, a CP Air employee.

Although the team's trip was subsidized by the school's student council and some of the teachers, the runners sought pledges for the distance they could run.

The $1,000 they raised will go to the local chapter of the cancer society.

The marathon was run by 4,000 competitors from around the world. A crowd of more than 10,000, including some of the Woodlands school's teachers, were on hand to urge the racers on.

"I told them that if they could do the training, then they could run in the marathon," says Wharram, a former British pro soccer player.

But he adds that the idea came from the students themselves.

U.S. TAKES GOLF HONOR

MUIRFIELD, Scotland (AP) — The United States successfully defended the Walker Cup golf trophy Thursday, defeating Britain 15-8-4.

The United States wrapped up the title by winning seven of Thursday's eight afternoon singles.

Earlier, it looked as if Britain might snatch the Cup away from the U.S. for only the third time since competition began in 1922. The U.S. led by only one match after the morning foursomes and at one stage of the singles the British were leading in four matches and trailing in only one.

But the home side faltered, spraying the course with no less than 29 bogeys and then wilted under the relentless American pressure.

Mike Hoch started the rout of the British by a late surge over the final four holes of the first singles to break Peter McEvoy, the leading British player, and win 3 and 1 after McEvoy had turned one up in a two-underpar 34.

The whole match was a triumph for Hoch, runner-up to John Cook in last year's U.S. Amateur. The 23-year-old had a perfect record here, teaming with Jay Sigel to win both his foursomes and routing an ailing Jim Buckley by a record 9 and 7 Wednesday.

The only U.S. singles loser Thursday was Marty West.

Some shoes are just that-shoes

WINNIPEG (CP) — Athletic shoes have become almost as much of a craze as the jogging and fitness fads which started people's feet pounding through the streets.

But many of the shoes are more decorative than serviceable, and an athlete must take care to pick the right pair, says Winnipeg physiotherapist D'Arcy Bain.

"Shoes are probably the one thing that will save a runner from physical punishment," says Bain, who runs a sports injury clinic.

He says the sole of a good training shoe should have a tough bottom and two layers of soft material to cushion the foot. A good sole should be flexible at the point where the foot bends and stiff from the arch to the heel.

The heel itself should be reinforced to take the constant wear of distance running, Bain says.

He adds that heel protection is important because a runner who is training properly lands on the heel first and rolls the foot down.

Also essential are a firm heel counter that cups in the heel, making it fit snugly in the shoe, and a soft heel lift to protect the Achilles tendon.

And he has a final piece of advice to athletes shopping for new shoes.

"You shouldn't dash out early Saturday morning to try to beat the crowd. Your feet swell during the day, so you should wait until later and get your shoes fitted when your feet are largest."

Otherwise, Bain says, athletes might suffer while running because the shoes can't compensate for normal swelling.

ARCHIE MOORE MAY BE COMING HERE

World renowned boxer now a social worker

The former light-heavyweight boxing champion of the world Archie Moore, might be a Terrace resident for a year.

The Northwest Native Social Workers Association is currently trying to arrange for Moore to come to the area to implement his Any Body Can (ABC) program in Terrace, as well as the various native villages in the area.

Moore is now conducting the program in the Halifax, Nova Scotia area, but will be finished there in time to arrive in Terrace Sept. The ABC program was developed by Archie Moore in order to motivate young people and adults to live healthier, happier, and more useful lives. The program includes:

- 1. Teaching basics of boxing and self-defence especially the under 16 year olds.

- 2. Drug and alcohol dependency-To discuss with young people drug and alcohol dependency problems and the value of healthy alternatives.
- 3. Vandalism-To work with, advise and assist all groups who are opposing vandalism.
- 4. Youth-To assist, advise and support any and all youth program to direct young people to healthier, happier and more useful lives.
- 5. Adult-To assist, advise and support any adult program which aims at healthier and happier lives.
- 6. Attitudes-To change negative attitudes of young people and adults to positive attitudes.

The Northwest Native Social Workers Association

feels the project is necessary because of "the strong presence of drug and alcohol abuse at the band levels, which leads to vandalism, family breakdown, loss of respect, loss of employment, and in some cases, loss of life." They feel that Moore would bring immediate respect to the program because of his stature in the sporting world, and because of the aims and goals he has for the program.

Moore's headquarters would be in Terrace, but while in the area he'll be spending approximately eighty per cent of his time in the various native villages implementing his program there.

Moore's services for the one year he'll be spending in the area, the association estimates, will cost approximately $60,000. This will cover his salary and expenses.

The money is being raised through donations, and several service clubs and local businesses have already been approached. Any donations would be greatly appreciated, and anyone wishing further information about the project can contact Walter Woods at 635-7127.

"We hope that the idea of someone of Archie Moore's stature coming to this area will draw the necessary financial support from the community," commented Woods.

The association is also hoping to locate a three-bedroom apartment or house available Sept. for Moore and his family.

PAT IS IN FRONT

NEW ROCHELLE, N.Y. (AP) — Pat Bradley, looking for her first victory of the season on the Ladies Professional Golf Association tour, took the lead with a six-under-par 66 Thursday in the opening round of a 72-hole $100,000 event at the Wykagyl Country Club. Bradley, who has finished second four times and third on three other occasions, tied an LPGA record with a 29 on the front nine. The 28-year-old veteran, a pro since 1974, registered an eagle on the par-five third hole and then scored five straight birdies from the sixth through 10th holes. An unusually small field of 73, three of them amateurs, entered the four-day tournament.

Connors, Evert take another win

PARIS (Reuter) — Jimmy Connors and Chris Evert of the United States easily advanced to the third round of the French Open tennis championships Thursday but three other seeded players fell by the wayside in the world's premier clay-court event.

The second-seeded Connors, seeking his first French title, dispatched Ramesh Krishnan of India 6-1, 6-1, 6-4 while the topseeded Evert beat compatriot Laura Dupont, 6-3, 6-3.

Eleventh-seeded Jose-Luis Clerc of Argentina was upset by Gilles Moretton of France 6-4, 6-2, 6-3 while 11th-seeded Mima Jausovec of Yugoslavia and 13th-seeded Rosie Casals of the U.S. were eliminated in women's singles.

Jausovec, the 1977 French champion, was ousted by Ivanna Madruga of Argentina 6-4, 6-4, while Casals fell to Hana Strachanova of Czechoslovakia 6-1, 6-4. Fourth-seeded Vitas Gerulaitis of the U.S. was among four other seeds to gain the third round of the men's tournament. Gerulaitis defeated Brad Rowe of the U.S. 6-4, 6-1, 6-2.

Argos pick one

TORONTO (CP) — Toronto Argonauts of the Canadian Football League announced Thursday the signing of running back Mark Bragagnolo to a multi-year contract.

Financial terms were not revealed by Tommy Hudspeth, manager of football operations.

Bragagnolo, a six-foot-one, 215-pounder from University of Toronto, scored five touchdowns in 1978.

TWO OF THREE CLIMBERS DIE

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Two Korean climbers died and a third received severe frostbite on Mount McKinley following a 2,500-foot fall which took them to the 15,200-foot level.

The dead climbers were identified as Koh Sang Don, who on Sept. 15, 1977, became the only Korean to climb Mount Everest, and Lee Ilkyo.

The climbers were members of a six-member Korean McKinley expedition which had successfully reached the 20,320-foot summit and was descending the West Rib when the fall occurred Tuesday evening, said Gary Brown, chief ranger at Mount McKinley National Park. Mount McKinley is the highest mountain in North America. The three who fell were roped together, Brown said.

The frostbite received by the survivor is expected to take portions of his feet and hands. The climber also is suffering from leg, spinal and abdominal injuries and is being treated in hospital at Anchorage.

The plunge was witnessed from 14,000 feet by mountain guide Diane Gay, a member of the first expedition to mush a dog team to the summit. However, she was unable to tell exactly what happened because of the distance.

It took six hours to stamp out a level ledge from which to base an evacuation by an Army helicopter Wednesday afternoon.

The Korean climb was sponsored by the Korea Times and Hankook Daily.

MAY BE BRAG

But he was right

CALGARY (CP) — Many eyebrows may have been raised when Ken Maeda, coach of the Canadian men's volleyball team, predicted several months ago that his team would finish in the medals at a recent tournament in Cuba.

But such skeptics were silenced.

Canada upset the favored United States team 3-2 and went on to win a silver medal in the zone competition that doubles as the trials for the Pan-American Games.

"I think we can get into the medals at the Pan-Am Games, too," Maeda said before the Calgary-based team left Wednesday for an exhibition tour of China and Japan.

"Canada has always been rated about 15th in the world. Now, we're ready to get into the top 10 or eight. Beating the U.S. gave us some spirit."

Team member Rich MacDonald said even the players were skeptical of Maeda's confidence before the Cuban competition.

"I don't think the team really quite believed we could beat the U.S., but when we did, it was the highlight of the trip. It's given us a lot of confidence."

Before its win in Cuba, Canada had lost five straight exhibition matches to the Americans in Miami. The games, however, allowed the Canadians to adjust to the warmer climate.

Maeda, head of Pakistan's national team for almost two years before arriving in Canada about a year ago, said he hoped the three-week, 12-match tour of the Far East would sharpen his team for the Pan-Am Games in Puerto Rico beginning July.

"We need top-notch international competition to be ready for the Pan-Am Games. The Cubans are No. 1. They're big, strong and can rally jump. The Chinese are not as big, but very quick. We have to improve our technique, especially our blocking."

"We're in as good shape as any team in the world. The other teams now know we can play and it's sure to put some pressure back on them."

The national team returns from the Orient June 23, before heading to Toronto, where most of the Canadian teams will assemble before the Pan-Am Games.

THE TERRACE/KITIMAT DAILY HERALD AUTOMOTIVE SECTION

RADIAL TIRES SHOULD BE MARKED

Radial snow tire owners should mark their tires "left" or "right" prior to removal for storage this spring in order to maintain the same direction of forward rotation when the tires are remounted next winter.

"Changing the normal direction of rotation on a radial tire after it has been 'broken in' by switching the tire and wheel from one side of the car to the other, can cause ride problems or result in less than optimum service," says Bill Noll, manager, product service for B.F. Goodrich Canada Limited.

Marking the tires with a piece of chalk or crayon prior to storage takes only a few minutes, yet insures proper remounting next season, Noll adds.

Conventional bias and bias-belted snow tires need not be marked, since they are normally rotated from one side of the car to the other, Noll points out, however, studded bias and bias-belted snow tires should not be rotated from side to side, to prevent stud loosening from driving torque.

Noll advises motorists to store mounted snow tires uninflated in sealed plastic bags to reduce the weathering effects of exposure to the atmosphere and the stress of internal air pressure.

Tire safety

Results of a tire safety campaign conducted by B.F. Goodrich in six U.S. test markets show that nine of every 10 cars inspected had improperly inflated tires.

One of every five cars had at least one tire with too little tread remaining for safe use.

"Even more critical," says Bill Noll, manager, product service for B.F. Goodrich Canada, "was the discovery that one of every 20 tires inspected was in danger of imminent failure. This constitutes a major threat to highway safety."

Major findings of the inspection program:

Inflation — More than 48 per cent of the tires inspected were underinflated, an average of 3.94 psi. Nearly 30 per cent were overinflated, with average overinflation of 3.93 psi. Only four per cent of the vehicles inspected had proper inflation in all four tires in use.

Tread — Seventeen per cent of the tires inspected showed unusual tread wear due to improper balance, alignment or similar problems. Nearly 21 per cent of the vehicles had at least one tire with insufficient tread. (Two-thirty-seconds of an inch is considered the minimum tread for safe operation.)

Replacement Recommended — Immediate replacement was recommended for more than five per cent of the tires inspected. Replacement was recommended only in cases where tires were determined to be in danger of immediate failure because of severe cuts and cracks, blisters, and similar conditions.

"While the tests were conducted in the U.S., driving conditions are similar in Canada," says Noll. "The tires inspected were of all manufacturers brands and had been used under almost every type of driving condition. The results demonstrate the need for drivers all over North America to understand the importance of regular tire maintenance."

Poorly timed engine means loss of power

Other conditions that waste power include poorly set ignition timing. A poorly timed engine means loss of engine power so more gasoline is needed to provide power necessary to operate. Other engine power robbers and fuel wasters include clogged PCV valve, plus other malfunctioning anti-pollution devices and poor compression due to bad valves or other engine defect.

To detect and correct any of these gas wasters, bring your car into your favorite service outlet for a tune-up. Don't be surprised if the fuel you save almost pays for the cost of that tune-up.

SPEEDING

A common infraction

Almost every driver exceeds the speed limit at some time or other. Some drivers exceed the speed limit continually — as a matter of habit. Others are occasionally inattentive and wander over the limit, and some drivers exceed the speed limit only when in a hurry or when passing another vehicle.

But whatever the reasons, everyone who exceeds the speed limit is breaking the law.

If you have a tendency to exceed the speed limit, here are a few facts that may help you reshape your attitude towards speeding.

No car can stop on a dime. When the brakes are applied, every vehicle, at any speed, will travel some distance before coming to a complete stop. This stopping distance varies greatly depending on road conditions, tires, brakes, and driver reaction time.

The stopping distance also varies greatly depending on the speed from which the vehicle stops. A doubling of speed means the stopping distance is increased four times. A tripling of speed means a nine-fold increase in stopping distance. Thus, any speed increase will mean a significantly greater increase in the distance required to bring a vehicle to a stop.

At 100 km/h, the typical stopping distance is about 77 meters (20 car lengths) on dry pavement.

The time saved by speeding is much less than most drivers realize. Even on long trips, the time saved by exceeding the speed limit is usually only a matter of minutes. Yet the price paid for this time saving is great — reckless passing, greater driver anxiety and fatigue, increased stopping distances, and reduced vehicle control, all contribute to accidents.

The faster you drive, the more power your car must deliver and this means more fuel consumption. This is certainly a big consideration these days.

Speeding is an offence under Section 140 of the Motor Vehicle Act and carries three demerit penalty points.

Speed, in excess of the speed limit, is the biggest single cause of accidents. Slow down and live.

A GOOD BELT OR TWO

Want to avoid car trouble? Consider this: Improperly cared for cooling systems can result in stalled cars and expensive repair bills. The Consumer Automotive Advisory Council suggests regular fan belt and radiator hose checks as an easy way to avoid cooling system problems. And be sure your cooling system is clean with plenty of the right 50-50 antifreeze-water mix.

IS IT REALLY THE BATTERY'S FAULT?

Does your battery go dead before your engine springs to life? The Consumer Automotive Advisory Council suggests that it may not be the battery's fault. Check for worn spark plugs, points or other ignition components that cause a balky engine to run down a battery. The council advises having these parts checked every six months, and having a complete tuneup performed on your car's engine at least once a year.

Treat battery with respect

Among the most important and least understood parts of today's modern automobile is the battery. Technically, a storage battery is an electrochemical device. In the process of releasing electrical energy to your car's electrical system, the battery produces hydrogen gas — highly explosive and very dangerous.

Like most parts of today's automobile, there are do's and don'ts to observe around auto batteries. Here's a list of them from the Consumer Automotive Advisory Council of Superior Muffler:

1. No smoking near a battery.
2. Keep your face away from the battery. Wear safety goggles.
3. Avoid sparks. When connecting booster cables, cover both batteries with a cloth. Be sure the final ground (negative) connection is made to the frame of the stalled car, as far as possible from the battery itself.

4. Be careful with tools. A wrench or pliers that contacts a "hot terminal" or wire and a grounded part of the car can create a spark strong enough to burn metal.

5. When carrying a battery, use a good carrying device. Spilled battery acid can eat into your clothing — and your skin — very quickly. If you do get some acid on you, flush it off at once with lots of water.

6. Don't wait for your battery to run completely down before checking it for proper charge. You can get a free battery inspection at almost any service station or garage, including the more than 1500 Superior Muffler dealers in North America. If your battery is weak, have it charged up or replaced before it leaves you stranded in the middle of nowhere.

Ways to make sure your vacation's safe

Vacation enjoyment almost always means driving to get there. It's great when you arrive, but the driver has a lot to contend with on the way. In the daytime, there is bright light striking through the windshield and at night, the flash of oncoming headlights creates a tiring problem.

Paradoxically, sunglasses can help provide better seeing both day and night — although under no circumstances should sunglasses ever be worn when driving in the dark.

Wearing sunglasses on a bright day, especially if you are going to be driving at night later on, is an important safety measure. Without daytime eye protection, your night vision may be diminished by an overload of brightness and you could be driving at night with your visual acuity cut in half without even realizing that you are not seeing as clearly as normal. Wearing sunglasses, then, during the day helps to protect your night vision. However, remember to never wear sunglasses to drive in the dark, no matter what anyone might tell you about how they kill the glare of oncoming headlights. Sunglasses do diminish headlight glare, but they can do it only by reducing all the other light to a dangerously low level. Daytime-glare problems are the ones that can easily be helped by wearing the right kind of sunglasses.

But what is glare?

Glare is largely horizontally polarized, reflected light bouncing off a specular surface such as the road, cars in front of you, packed snow, wet pavements and any other reflective area. Horizontally reflected glare is a bright sheen — useless light that brings no information to your eyes and actually may obscure what you need to see to drive safely.

Everyone who drives has experienced sudden blinding glare. At a bend in the road or as you pull out to pass another car, the world is suddenly covered with a sheen of white light. You may find yourself driving "blind" for 1 to 5 seconds. Obviously, that's not a pleasant prospect.

Polarizing sunglass lenses, such as those found in all Polaroid sunglasses, have a molecular structure which screens out as much as 99% of the horizontally reflected glare and allows useful light to reach your eyes so you can see the road in front of you, comfortably and safely.

There are other safe-seeing precautions a good driver takes as well. Before you start out, be sure all your car windows are clean, inside as well as out. Do not leave maps and other articles on the dashboard where they will reflect in the windshield. Be sure your headlights are properly adjusted to give you the best possible view of the road without blinding oncoming drivers. Remember to have the headlights cleaned off too, as they are subject to the same road dirt as your windshield.

Always keep more than one pair of sunglasses in the car.

Traditional wallcoverings with modern features

Although furniture may characterize the style of a room, there is nothing like wallcoverings to set the mood and bring everything together.

This is particularly evident when it comes to the more traditional designs, because they can capture some of the inherent charm of our Heritage homes and bring it into our modern day lives. Yet they have none of the drawbacks of their forerunners, for many of today's wallcoverings have the appearance, texture and colors of the 17th and 18th century wallpapers, but are stain-resistant and scrubbable, even dry-strippable.

"Wallcoverings can help recreate the comfort and sense of well-being of a traditional home, particularly in a dining room where the architectural feature of a chair rail, in particular, immediately brings back the look of the past," says Mary Prud'homme, Design and Color Consultant for Sunworthy Wallcoverings. "In our fine old traditional homes, the dado or area below the chair rail was of wood, paint or wallpaper. This very same look can easily be achieved with today's companion wallcoverings."

You'll find companion wallcoverings that can be used to unify rooms or to define areas such as an alcove in a room. In a typical traditional setting, you might see a geometric stencil type of design similar to those popular in early wallpapers used as a backdrop behind a camelback sofa or other fine furniture, with a companion snow crystal design in reverse tones used on adjoining walls. The effect can be quite charming.

Some of the less formal traditional patterns lend themselves to the now very popular country look in decorating. For those who are lucky enough to live in an old home with all the traditional character and architecture, it is easy to achieve this look simply by choosing suitable wallcoverings for a country look, say in the kitchen. But if you have a new home or are renovating a not-so-old one, you can still achieve the effect with a little ingenuity. For instance, it is fairly easy for a do-it-yourselfer to install mock ceiling beams in the kitchen or even just a simple wood strip to form a chair rail. Choose a wallcovering such as an all-over chintz featuring pineapples. Then you could give cabinet doors a lift with a colorful wallcovering, bringing out a color in the wall covering. Add ladder back or Windsor chairs, a Colonial lamp and other accessories along with lots of plants and the country look is complete.

Wallcoverings which can provide these and other charming traditional effects can be found in Sunworthy's Heritage Homes collection of pre-pasted, stain-resistant, scrubbable and completely dry-strippable wallcoverings.

Quality windows let you enjoy view in comfort

Anyone lucky enough to live in a home with attractive views shouldn't have to go outside to enjoy the beauties of nature. Yet, that is the dismal prospect for homeowners who think one way to conserve energy is to limit both the size and number of windows.

Such a solution may be proper for run-of-the-mill windows with single panes of glass and non-insulating sash and frame. Well-made, wood windows with either separate, storm, sash or double-pane, insulating glass, on the other hand, can help conserve energy and allow a homeowner to use sufficient glass areas to enjoy the view.

Wood is used in the frame and sash of quality windows because it is a natural insulator and requires no "thermal break." Double-pane insulating glass or separate storm sash reduces heat loss through the glass area. Precision-made, wood windows also have factory-applied weather stripping to reduce heat-robbing, air infiltration. Many are now available with a low-maintenance, exterior, factory-finish that virtually eliminates the need for periodic painting.

The factors in wood windows that work so well in winter to reduce fuel-robbing heat loss and air infiltration also work to limit heat gain in summer. The result is lower air-conditioning costs during the warmer months.

Home Improvements

Planning ahead on home improvements keeps your house in good trim, modern and pleasant. It's easier on the family budget, too.

A five-year program makes good sense for many, as it takes into consideration growing youngsters and changing family needs.

"The way to maintain a home's living and actual values," says one expert, "is to keep it up. One year, it may mean buying a new living room suite; another, repainting the exterior; another, installing air-conditioning."

The consultant suggests a family conference to plan a five-year home improvement program. This should result in decisions and a list.

Bathroom Lighting

In order to give shadowless light, a bathroom mirror should have a lighting fixture on either side and one in the ceiling above the head to illuminate all of the face equally.

The latest type of lighting on the market is track lighting and it is ideal for this purpose, because it is not stationary like other fixtures. It can be moved along its track on the ceiling and swiveled around to focus wherever necessary.

Space Program

Are you wasting space in your kitchen by having the shelves too far apart? If so, either take them out and re-distance them or add one in between shelves as they are now.

You will find that a narrow shelf for cans of spice and seasoning built in just underneath the cupboard above the work table will be a great convenience. Make it just the width of the cans. One layer of space for cans is the best as far as quick use is concerned.

WHEN THE TIME COMES FOR REROOFING, a studied choice regarding material, color and style can give your home a fresh, appealing look that will last for years. These three-dimensional asphalt shingles create deep, attractive shadows. Available in earth-tone colors, they can be used to blend or contrast with the siding.

RELIGION ROUNDUP

TORONTO (CP) — The United Church has joined more than 200 church and consumer groups in boycotting Nestle products because of some of Nestle's marketing practices in the Third World.

The church is urging members to stop buying Nestle, Nescafe, Taster's Choice, Libby's and other Nestle products because of the Swiss-based company's practices of distributing free samples and sending people dressed as nurses into hospitals to promote infant products among new mothers, says the June issue of The United Church Observer.

The formulas are often mixed with contaminated water in unclean bottles, resulting in disease and deaths among infants in developing countries, the church says.

Nestle denies the claim.

TORONTO (CP) — Some parts of Canada, especially Newfoundland, will suffer from a shortage of United Church ministers, says Rev. Robert Shorten, of the church's division of ministry, personnel and education.

Rev. Shorten reported 103 ministry vacancies this year. Fifty or 60 vacancies are necessary to allow for easy movement of clergy from one congregation to another.

Newfoundland will receive only four of the 12 new ministers it requested.

RICHMOND, Que. (CP) — French-speaking Protestants, who form a tiny minority in Quebec, met last week for some mutual encouragement at their second annual conference.

One thousand paragon from United, Lutheran and Presbyterian Churches in Quebec City, Montreal, Shawinigan and Bedford, as well as Ottawa, attended.

"Whether conscious of it or not, a ghetto mentality has developed over the years," said Rev. Charles Odier, of Montreal. Another minister said the main obstacle to the growth of protestantism in Quebec is the education system, which is divided along confessional lines.

MONTREAL (CP) — A report on social justice in Canada and the Third World prepared by the Conference of Canadian Catholic Bishops calls for the church to express solidarity with the poor around the world.

At a news conference to release the report, Msgr. Bernard Hubert said the report is intended for Roman Catholic Church members "to help them develop a critical conscience in regards to conditions and unjust structures in Canada and elsewhere."

TORONTO (CP) — The three political parties in the Ontario legislature have expressed their best wishes for Archbishop Gerald Emmett Carter of Toronto, who recently was named one of 15 new cardinals by Pope John Paul.

Archbishop Carter will be installed in the College of Cardinals July 1 in Rome.

He'll share it

OTTAWA (CP) — The author of a new book dealing with juvenile delinquency plans to share his royalties with the young people he wrote about.

Elliott Leyton, author of The Myth of Delinquency, studied the behavior of eight delinquents while living at a training school.

"I love these kids," he says. "We've shared a lot."

Leyton, a professor of anthropology at Memorial University in St. John's, Nfld., says he wanted to prompt society to confront itself with its false attitudes toward juvenile delinquency.

"Delinquents are the by-product of our stratified society," he says. "They have been rejected by their families for a variety of reasons and choose to assault those symbols of family living."

Leyton aimed his book at both parents and social workers.

"Most of the parents I deal with don't know what they're doing wrong. It's usually a subtle process of action and reaction between parent and child."

"I admit the toughest things to do in life are finding your place in society and raising children."

Academics and social workers are also guilty of not trying to understand delinquent behavior, Leyton says.

"These kids aren't defective. They're the way they are because of an unfortunate series of sociological events."

The teenagers he met at the reformatory were from lower-income families. Leyton says he believes that the degradation felt by people on the bottom rung of society is often taken out on their children.

"We have to change our whole society to nip the problem in the bud. I'm not proposing a revolution, but I am suggesting we start trying to understand these delinquents we're producing."

Better informed social workers and increased family counselling services could smooth the road for the delinquent when he leaves the penal institution, Leyton believes.

"There's a high failure rate with this kind of treatment," he says. "It's a high failure rate with this kind of treatment."

FROM THE CHURCH

"Two people stood talking. One remarked that there were very few birds around these days. The other surprised, replied, 'Why my backyard is full of them.' The topic ended there but the one with the birds started thinking."

Their neighbor had meticulous grounds. No plant grew out of place. The lawn was dark green with many a clover or dandelion to mar it. It looked smooth and unbroken like the putting greens of a golf course.

The one with the birds was tidy but with a difference. Clover grew in the lawn. Dandelions flowered all around and worst of all weeds of dandelion seed puffs stood tall to catch the vagrant breeze and send their tiny parachutes soaring. And there were birds, little brown birds, hosts of them, sitting on the dandelion stems enjoying a feast of seeds. Yellow warblers darted amongst them intent on the insects attracted by the flowers. And above them all flycatchers zoomed. An old dog dozed in the sun, insurance against stalking cats.

Altogether, a peaceful scene. What pleasant friends those yellow flowers bring.

God's Spirit is likened in the Bible to a dove, a bird. Both are free and untrammelled.

No one tells when and where a bird will go. Even less can one dictate to God's Spirit. The birds came because the flowers invited them. A person's heart is like a garden, it's private to each unless it's opened in invitation. God waits and wants to be invited in. Does your heart extend that invitation?

Teeth now seen as so important

BRANTFORD, Ont. (CP) — The ghost of a silver smile is no longer the exclusive preserve of the young. More adults every year are flashing mouths full of metal.

But unlike children, they're doing it willingly.

Dr. Victor Schacher, a Brantford orthodontist, predicts that 50 per cent of his patients will be adults within three years. They totalled 33 per cent last year, compared with five per cent less than 10 years ago.

"Lots of adults whose parents weren't able to afford orthodontics now find themselves in a position to pay for treatment," he says. "Good-looking teeth are something they've always wanted and they're now getting them."

Technological advances that take much of the discomfort out of wearing braces have added to their appeal, he says. The traditional variety consists of discs that circle and separate each tooth, much like a ring.

But many orthodontists now use stainless steel, glued-on brackets that adhere only to the front of the teeth.

"With the advent and refinement of glue-on, the discomfort is about 10 per cent of what it once was with the other braces," Schacher says. "Nothing goes between the teeth, so it's not uncomfortable."

Another advantage is ease of cleaning. The new brackets don't trap food particles that promote decay.

"Two local dentists can vouch for the increased use of braces among adults — they both wear them."

Dr. Boyd Van Allen says

the idea occurred to him during his first year of dental school. His secondary teeth had grown in crooked and the back ones didn't meet properly, but he couldn't afford the process until last year, his third year out of school.

"The crooked teeth were more noticeable to me than to anybody else," he says.

"When crooked teeth are growing in, the look isn't that important to a child. But as you grow older it becomes more important."

Van Allen says he felt strange sitting in an orthodontist's chair when the patient beside him was half his age.

"You get used to that feeling," he says. "And besides that, adolescents are realizing that it's not unusual to see adults wearing braces."

The dentist says his own adult patients probably are encouraged to have their teeth straightened when they see him wearing braces.

"I think if I recommend orthodontic treatment to someone my age, they will consider it because I'm living evidence that adult orthodontics can be done."

Dr. Mike Veer, who has been wearing traditional braces for four of his 35 years, agrees.

"I think my wearing braces makes a difference when I'm advising patients to have treatment," he says. "If I had crooked teeth, I have a feeling they would be skeptical about treatment."

"I can see the need for adult orthodontics and hopefully I can convey this to someone who needs it. I think it is important enough for me and would wholeheartedly recommend it to others."

Letters of intrest

TORONTO (CP) — Two Toronto residents are reciving letters from an exotic collection of correspondents.

Indira Gandhi, Gore Vidal, Buckminster Fuller, Ann Landers, Benjamin Spock, Georges Simenon, Jean-Pierre Aumont, Heinrich Boll and Senator Keith Davey are only a few of the many who have written to Sandra Martin and Roger Hall.

The reason for all this correspondence is a book to be called Where Were You? — an anecdotal history of the 20th century to be published in New York and Toronto in the spring of 1980.

Martin and Hall believe that everyone remembers their location and emotions when great events happen. So they've written to 900 notables and not-notables around the world, asking their reaction to 40 events — among them, Lindbergh's flight across the Atlantic, the deaths of John Kennedy and Martin Luther King, Pearl Harbor, D-Day, Sputnik, Roger Bannister's four-minute mile and Woodstock.

In addition, they've waded through published biographies, memoirs and diaries to learn the reactions of hundreds of literary and historical figures to great events.

The authors say they are delighted with the response.

Buckminster Fuller sent them an elaborate chart relating the events of his life to modern world history.

Wardair admits it's in financial trouble

EDMONTON (CP) — Wardair International Ltd., the small but active Edmonton-based charter airline, is in financial trouble.

That word came from company president Max Ward, who told a recent shareholders' meeting the Canadian transport commission must alter regulations to allow Wardair to carry a percentage of passengers on a straight non-charter, scheduled service basis.

A hearing on Wardair's application is scheduled for July 9 and Ward warned that if the transport commission rejects the bid Wardair could go under by the end of the year.

The airline is also waiting for a decision on an earlier application for a licence to introduce advanced booking domestic charter-class service between major Canadian cities.

Air Canada, CP Air and a number of regional airlines, including the Alberta government's Pacific Western Airlines, already offer the bargain basement fares known as ABCs with discounts of 50 per cent or more for major routes.

Ward said there would be no dividend from last year's operations. Although Wardair showed a net profit of more than $5.4 million, up from $3.8 million in 1977, a substantial part of the revenue came from the sale of the airline's two 10-year-old Boeing 707 aircraft and related equipment.

Thorne Riddell and Co., Wardair's auditors, said that if the planes had not been sold and certain tax writeoffs not used, Wardair would have taken a net loss last year and the year before.

Wardair is actually two firms: the international charter service which operates four planes — two McDonnell Douglas DC-10s and two Boeing 747s — and a northern service, based in Yellowknife, N.W.T., which has a fleet of small propeller-driven aircraft.

Brian Clark, assistant to marketing vice-president George Curley, says the two sections are financially separate and the northern service is not affected by the charter service's problems.

Barry Thomson, who sits on the transport commission, said in an interview Wednesday that the decision on Wardair's application for domestic charterclass fares is being written and should be handed down well before the end of the year.

But in an unrelated application, the commission criticized Wardair for the way it ran its international operations.

Wardair asked that it be allowed to consolidate some charter flights as a cost-cutting move, meaning a flight would make stops in more than one Canadian city to pick up passengers before heading for its foreign destinations. Previously, the airline would run separate flights from each city.

The commission recently allowed the change, but Thomson, who dissented from the decision, said

Wardair should not have doubled its passenger-carrying capacity by buying new aircraft in the last two years and then blamed the regulatory body for its financial problems.

Thomson added that the commission's position on the previous application would have no bearing on the ABC application.

Clark, meanwhile, said he could not speculate on why Wardair should not get a domestic charter-class licence, since both national carriers and most regional carriers have one.

HIS STYLE

Not so aggressive

MONTREAL (CP) — The new president of the Montreal Board of Trade, T. Denis Jotcham, is not the aggressive defender of the city's business community that his predecessor was.

But that's just Jotcham, the president of Foster Advertising Ltd., practising his trade. He prefers persuasion to confrontation to get what he wants.

During his two-year term, Reginald K. Groome relentlessly and loudly criticized the provincial government for its language and taxation policies, which he said were responsible for business leaving the city.

Jotcham, on the other hand, wants a lower political profile for the board.

"I'll think we'll play the whole referendum campaign by ear," he told his new constituents after his election this week.

He doesn't want the board to take sides during the coming vote on sovereignty-association. But the board "will speak out on economic issues related to the referendum question, of course."

The 61-year-old Welsh-born board president attended Montreal's Lower Canada College and McGill University, where he entered the Canadian Officers Training Corps. When the Second World War broke out, he left McGill and went overseas with the Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry.

When Major Jotcham returned from the war, second-in-command of the Royal Canadian Regiment, he worked as a salesman in the printing industry and then as a sales manager of a paint firm.

Years before Montreal talked of a head office exodus, the paint firm wanted to send him to Ontario. But he was already president of the Junior Advertising and Sales Club of Montreal, and wanted to stay.

He quit, joined Red Foster's ad agency as Montreal-office manager and has stayed for 23 years.

He has also become president of Sherwood Communications Group Ltd., a holding company for Foster and eight subsidiary companies.

Jotcham is a Baptist church deacon, a director of a Montreal hospital and a member of the Quebec executive of the Canadian Council of Christians and Jews.

In his spare time he plays the organ and keeps in shape by gardening, curling and golfing.

Jotcham has no pet projects planned for his year in office at the board of trade. "We'll just keep doing everything we can for the business community and Montreal in general."

The Big Inch

That blank box above is really a one-inch ad. It's a full column wide and it's one inch deep. Ordinarily it would contain a message for our readers and wouldn't look quite as lonely as it does on this page. And it is that message that changes the little space into the BIG INCH.

Here is how it works.

We'll put your message in that space for $2.88 or less. Then we'll reproduce it and distribute it 9,500 times with each issue of the Tuesday DAILY HERALD. That is 9,500 inches of space we'll allot for your message.

So — in terms of total column-inches — your $2.88 is really buying 56½ pages of newsprint. That's more newsprint than there is in all the pages of this issue you're reading.

But that's not all.

If you were to mail your message through the post office, it would cost you $1,615 just for stamps. The DAILY HERALD does this for you for only $2.88 or less. That is the sort of bargain most people only dream about getting.

And it's what makes that lonely little box into the BIG INCH.

Call the DAILY HERALD at 635-6357 and let us deliver your message in the BIG INCH. It's the most efficient and economical way to let the people of Skeena know you have wares or services they can use.

POPE NOTICED

He likes to give

TORONTO (CP) — The certificate from the Pope reads: "His Holiness John Paul II paternally imparts a special Apostolic Blessing to Michael Behan."

Michael Behan treasures it. He keeps it in his tiny apartment and shows it to visitors with a "What do you think of that?" and a grin on his face. He talks about having it properly framed — that is if he doesn't give it away first.

Behan likes to give. And after 10 years of doing it full time in downtown Toronto, he has become very good at it — which is why he's known as Mr. Sunshine.

He spends two or three hours a day scouring second-hand stores, searching for clothes in good condition, especially baby clothes. He then piles them into a baby carriage and takes them home.

After washing the clothes, he matches them with whatever number of dolls he has on hand, and dresses them up.

The next day, he goes out to hospitals, homes or churches and figures out how he can best give away the whole lot.

Although he gives away all sorts of things, from high chairs to gift certificates he buys out of his $300 a month pension, Behan is best known for his dolls.

He also is called The Dolly Man.

He finds the dolls at second-hand stores, scrounges them from friends and rescues them from trash cans. He then gives them a thorough brushing, spraying them with disinfectant and finally giving them names and make-believe backgrounds to impress the little girls who will get them.

He goes to downtown hospitals looking for children whose parents are unable, too busy, or too disinterested to visit them.

During the steelworker's strike in Sudbury, Ont., he went on a clotheshunt for families living on strike pay. He gave the lot to the St. Vincent de Paul Society which forwarded the clothes to the northern town.

Behan doesn't like talking about what he does.

He'll talk all day about his dolls, or the people he has met in the hospitals, but ask him why he's so kind and he will blush and grow shy.

But the answer might lie in a stack of thank-you cards and letters he has received over the years, the poignant notes from children addressed to Uncle Mike. Those are the only things he won't give away.

TORONTO (CP) — Angel City is the name of the play actor Robert Silverman now is starring in at Toronto's Free Theatre, but three years ago Silverman almost made it to the place where angels live.

Things had been going well for Silverman, a 34-year-old Vancouver native, until a February night in 1976 when he was hit by a car on a busy Toronto street.

He had had supporting roles in three feature films and a considerable amount of TV drama to his credit. But the accident left him critically ill and his life has been one long and painful improvisation ever since.

For two weeks after the accident, Silverman lay in a deep coma with a fractured skull, multiple fractures of the left knee, fractured bones in the right leg, multiple abrasions and contusions, a pinched nerve in the right arm and a severe concussion.

Over the next two months, after numerous complications and relapses, his condition improved.

At one point, he suddenly sat bolt upright in bed and said, "I've been hit by a car."

It was his first acknowledgement of what had happened. It would be 10 days before he spoke again.

He eventually was put on a gruelling round of conventional speech therapy and painful psychotherapy. But there was the implicit message: You'll never recover. You'll never act again.

Months later, sitting at home in his wheelchair, his therapy almost at a standstill, he recalled saying, "If I'd known what I was going to have to go through, I'd have made sure I never came out of the coma."

At the time, he had no sense of smell, trouble distinguishing colors and double vision. His hearing was unreliable, his tongue was thick and thoughts came fitfully.

Finally, in September, 1977, a friend told Silverman about the Centre for Neurological Rehabilitation in Philadelphia, where doctors had discovered that the brain could be retrained.

Silverman was given an exercise program tailored to his needs by the centre's doctors. All that was required was a large team of volunteers to help him. Fifty people offered their services to Silverman, but after six months, only a dozen were left in the program.

But he pushed on. Over and over and over, for four hours a day and more, he continued his therapy.

It was a humiliating grind, he says now.

But the dedication paid off. His senses cleared, his mental organization and diction progressed to the point where conversation was no longer a hardship. Over the past 17 months, Silverman has returned to Philadelphia seven times for reassessment.

He now is at the point where he is down to a half hour a day working by himself. In his own view, he is 90 per cent of the way toward a full recovery. Before the accident, acting was the only thing that mattered, he said in a recent interview. But his long recovery period has given him time to think.

"Before, it (acting) was the Holy Grail," he says. Now it's just what I do — a job."

And you wonder why they sell?

LOS ANGELES (Reuter)

— Sex is becoming a television hit in living rooms throughout North America. A boom in the sale of home video recorders, which enable people to record television programs, has led to a rush on adult film cassettes, industry officials say.

Such X-rated films as Deep Throat, The Devil in Miss Jones and Fantasies have become big attractions for the home market, they say.

Stephen Roberts, a videocassette distribution official with 20th Century-Fox film studios, says it is impossible to give an accurate figure, but the estimates that up to 60 per cent of films bought by video recorder owners are of X-rated material.

Roberts and other members of the industry estimate that 800,000 homes in the United States already have videocassette recorders, and that the total will be above the one-million mark by the end of this year.

The recorders cost between $750 and $1,300 and the cassettes sell for between $35 and $100. The X-rated material is usually at the top of the price range.

A record shop in Woodland Hills, a Los Angeles suburb, recently included in its display of videocassette films Flesh Gordon and The First Nudie Musical.

"We have nothing on sale here you couldn't see at a cinema," a salesman says. "Films here are more of the type shown to adult audiences — very soft pornographic material as opposed to hard porn."

But many people apparently prefer to buy or rent cassettes rather than go to adult cinemas. Roberts says the average owner of a videocassette recorder is married, over 40 and in the middle-income bracket.

A psychiatrist at the University of California in Los Angeles, Dr. Joshua Golden, says these are the people who would prefer to watch adult films without the worry of being noticed. "The younger generation has grown up in a social climate which allowed more access to sexual material," he says.

INFO

HEALTH DR. BOB YOUNG

Have you ever wondered how and why a laxative works? Probably not, as long as it does the job intended. Many people think they require a laxative at times (in truth they probably do not), so an outline of the common ones may be useful.

The word laxative means "to promote looseness," and comes from the same source as the word relax.

There are four main types of laxatives that can be taken by mouth. I will not discuss enemas or suppositories. The bowels may be made to function by use of a stimulant, a salt, a stool softener, or a bulk-forming laxative.

Some of the stimulants occur in nature. Examples are cascara bark and senna pods. A tea can be made of either, but it is more usual to use a commercial tablet or liquid. Castor oil is also a natural material, being an extract of the castor bean. It is a potent drug and probably should be used only in preparation for bowel x-rays, and a few other selected indications.

Ex-Lax, Feen-a-mint and Dulcolax are well-known trade names for stimulant laxatives that rely on chemicals for their action. Their effect is similar to the natural ones but they are more potent.

Saline laxatives—"a dose of salts"—act by holding water in the intestines. This stretches the wall of the bowel and, as a result of a normal reflex, the bowels move. Milk of Magnesia and Eno's are examples.

Stool softeners are detergent-like chemicals that do as their name implies. They are gentle and effective and are safe, at least for intermittent use. Colace and Surfak are common ones.

Also effective are bulk-formers. These are plant materials (or man-made cellulose products) that absorb large amounts of water and provide an easily passed movement. They are slow to act and are best when chronic constipation must be treated. Metamucil and Siblin are examples, but unprocessed bran is cheaper, every bit as good, and probably better for you.

Alcohol used as fuel

RIO DE JANEIRO (Reuters) — Banners blowing in the breeze along Rio's fashionable Avenida Atlantica blatantly proclaim that Brazil is entering the alcoholic era.

Drivers paste stickers to their rear windows saying: "I am an alcoholic."

Even the president of the republic has helped to set the trend by announcing he is turning to alcohol.

But Brazil is not about to embark on a wild drinking spree. The slogans are part of the country's drive to convert alcohol distilled from sugar cane into a major source of fuel.

Brazil is the world's largest producer of sugar cane and hopes that its over-abundance of this crop can make up for the lack of oil that shackles the developing economy.

Last year Brazil imported more than 80 per cent of its oil needs at a cost of $4 billion.

Energy research programs following the 1973 oil crisis established that sugar cane alcohol can be mixed with gasoline to serve as a fuel for cars without requiring any alterations to engines.

Brazil has harnessed its enormous sugar surplus to ease the burdensome oil problem that has largely been to blame for pushing inflation to more than 48 per cent this year.

Most gas stations now are pumping out the mixed fuel. But economic planners envisage a day when all vehicles in Brazil will run on pure alcohol alone.

Several months ago major motor manufacturers said complicated modifications would have to be made to car engines before they could be propelled by 100-per-cent alcohol.

But many have changed their tune since the collapse of the pro-Western regime in Iran, the world's second-largest oil exporter, which will affect the price and supply of oil.

After years of experimenting, major Brazilian subsidiaries of such manufacturers as Volkswagen and Fiat have developed cars that drive perfectly on alcohol and an estimated 10,000 such cars now are travelling on Brazilian roads.

To keep them going, the federal government recently inaugurated 80 fuel pumps in the federal capital and four provincial capitals serving pure alcohol alone.

Leading manufacturers say most cars could be adapted to use alcohol instead of gasoline at a cost of not more than $300.

Mines and Energy Minister Cesar Cals said recently that the government was determined to reduce the huge oil-import bill.

He told journalists that the auto industry had been urged to mass produce cars capable of running on alcohol alone.

Fears that the new sources of fuel would be more expensive than normal gasoline were dispelled by the minister who said the cost at the recently installed pumps would be just over $2 a gallon, two-thirds of the present fuel price.

Sources in the industry say the alcohol-driven car will cover only slightly less distance to the gallon than gas-fuelled cars.

The government's enthusiasm for the project was illustrated by President Joao Baptista Figueiredo who announced that he had ordered his official car to be altered to consume pure alcohol.

The president also recommended that official government cars should follow suit.

Most of Brazil's sugar is grown in the poverty-stricken northeast, where the new source of energy promises to revitalize the economy.

Large extensions of land will have to be devoted to growing sugar cane and refineries built if alcohol is to replace the 3.3 billion gallons of gasoline Brazilian drivers use yearly.

Cals said sugar alcohol production for this year would reach 750 million gallons and other official sources said by 1981 the country will have saved at least $1 billion in oil imports.

DESPITE CONGESTION

Japanese traffic Rolls along

HONG KONG (Reuters) — There are just five metres of road space for every car in traffic-congested Hong Kong. But that doesn't worry the chauffeur-driven Chinese millionaire who is eager to show off with that most elegant of status symbols — the Rolls Royce.

Dick Arbustler, a Rolls distributor here, says there are more Rolls per kilometre of road space here than anywhere else in the world. Why? It's simple, he says. "In Hong Kong, people with a lot of money want to be seen to have a lot of money. Anybody who buys a Rolls expects people to admire his purchase."

Charles C. Lee, a young Chinese solicitor who runs the Rolls Royce Enthusiasts Club here, admits to being a real exhibitionist about his purchase.

"People like to show off. People own a Rolls and say to everyone, 'I am a successful man.'"

Lee, the proud owner of the first all-gold Rolls Royce in Hong Kong, adds: "Most Rolls owners here are Chinese — the businessmen and bankers."

The exclusive club met for dinner in an elegant country club here recently, and for a night, transformed the car park into a millionaire's row with a line of gleaming Rolls Royce autos.

Club members include Sir Run Run Shaw, who heads Asia's largest film studio, and Sir Yukong Pad, the world's biggest independent ship owner.

Lee notes one problem that he and other club members face:

"You cannot leave your Rolls in the street because someone will give it a big scratch on the bonnet."

What about the energy crisis which has prompted Hong Kong authorities to bring in a series of fuel conservation measures?

Lee points out with a wry smile: "The people who own Rolls Royces do not worry about a couple of extra dollars a gallon."

The Rolls Silver Shadow II model costs $104,000 U.S. here.

Your Personal MONEY Management

Do you give yourself too much credit? A key question in personal money management is how much credit is too much for you. These suggestions from The Consumer Credit Institute, a counseling service of over 800 consumer finance companies nationwide, may help you tell.

It's a good idea to establish a basic budget or money management plan. This involves developing figures on the usual costs of living at the standard you have selected. Set aside enough to be sure to have money for essentials and provide a regular savings plan as a cushion for emergencies. Then you will have the facts to determine what credit payments you can afford to make.

DEAR ABBY

By Abigail Van Buren
1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc.

DEAR ABBY: My problem is that I am getting so much advice I am dizzy, and here I am asking you for more advice yet, which only proves how mixed up I am.

My husband dropped dead of a massive heart attack three weeks ago. He was only 55 and never had any kind of heart trouble, so you can imagine how shocked I was when he died in the middle of a poker game.

Now I am getting advice from all sides. My sister tells me to sell my house and move into an apartment. My brother tells me to keep the house—it will be worth more next year. One friend tells me to take a trip. Another friend says, "Stay home. You can't run away from yourself."

I'm also getting business advice. Some say, "Sell the business and put your money into securities." Others say, "Hang on to the business and run it yourself."

Abby, how does a widow know who to listen to?

CONFUSED IN BUFFALO

DEAR CONFUSED: The best advice I can give you is to take no advice while you are in a state of confusion. You have suffered an enormous shock and need more time to think things through before making any decisions. In the meantime, don't sell anything, don't buy anything, and don't sign anything. And good luck.

DEAR ABBY: I am 57 and John is 62. We have been going together for nearly four years. I've been married and so has he, and neither of us want to get married again, but we do enjoy each other's company. We do NOT live together, but I'm not saying we haven't spent nights together.

We also have taken some wonderful trips together. What I am saying is that we are very close-like a married couple, only we don't live together.

What do I call him when I introduce him to people, or refer to him? It sounds so foolish to call him my boyfriend. He's not my fiance because we have no plans to marry. He's more than an escort, but I certainly wouldn't call him my lover.

Please advise. OUT OF IDEAS IN BIG D

DEAR OUT: Introduce him as your friend. The nature of your relationship need not be explained.

DEAR ABBY: You made the statement that a child cannot be darker than his darker parent. That is correct, Abby, if only ONE parent has Negro genes. Skin color has no dominance but is a blending of genes.

It is possible, however for a child to be darker than either of his parents if-and only if-both parents carry Negro genes.

Your answer needs to be clarified. I have known such occurrences to cause husbands to unjustly accuse their wives of adultery.

My authority is "Principles of Human Genetics" by Curt Stern, Published by W.H. Freeman & Co., San Francisco, Calif. (1956), pages 325 to 332.

Today's Cryptoquip clue: Y equals A

The Cryptoquip is a simple substitution cipher in which each letter used stands for another. If you think that X equals O, it will equal O throughout the puzzle. Single letters, short words, and words using an apostrophe can give you clues to locating vowels. Solution is accomplished by trial and error.

Often in business for yourself, you have executive ability. Whatever your field, you put your individual stamp on what you do. Somewhat religious by nature, your best success comes with the development of a philosophy of life. Balance your curiosity with a willingness to study, and you'll succeed in intellectual pursuits. Law, science, teaching, and architecture are other fields open to you. Birthdate of: Pat Boone, singer; Wm. Sloan Coffin Jr., minister; and Marilyn Monroe, actress.
